DEMAND LOYALTY TO KING

PREMIER ATTEMPTS TO CRUSH MOVEMENT SUPPORTING CAROL

Leader Of Carolist Party
Seized — Issue
Warning

BERLIN, Oct. 25.—Premier Bratianu, of Roumania, has massed troops around all government buildings at Bucharest and today demanded a declaration of loyalty to six year old King Michael from the opposition, said a dispatch from the Roumanian frontier. This is the boy king's sixth birthday.

According to other advices from Bucharest today, the Roumanian government has officially announced that Manolescu, leader of the Carolist party, will be court-martialed charged with being an agent of those attempting to disturb the present constitutional settlement of the future ruler of the country.

Manolescu was arrested yesterday and the government announced that it was preparing to deal severely with all those connected with the movement for the return of former Crown Prince Carol.

Bucharest is under special military control. Public or private assemblies without a permit from the commander of the Bucharest garrison are forbidden.

Realizing that a strong plot is afoot to return Carol to Roumania, Premier Bratianu is taking the strongest measures to crush the plans before Carol can arrive.

Strict censorship is being maintained. All Roumanian newspapers are forbidden to report the arrest of former State Secretary Manolescu.

The official newspaper Lupta printed an editorial demanding that all Roumanian editors who print reports about the royal family be imprisoned.

In view of the strained political situation in Roumania Premier Bratianu is trying to reach an agreement with the opposition (National Peasant Party), which is supporting Carol's return.

All the absent ministers have been notified to return to Bucharest for an extraordinary council.

One journalist who violated the censorship regulations was arrested.

An official proclamation has been issued by the Bucharest government warning that the "severe measures" will be taken to suppress the movement for Carol's return.

Carol is reported to have sent letters to all the Roumanian political leaders challenging the right of his son Michael to occupy the throne and demanding a referendum of the throne issue.

Late advices from Bucharest said that Princess Helen's proposed trip to Florence, Italy, to attempt to arrange a meeting with her husband, Carol, has been cancelled. She was to have departed this evening.

QUAKE'S FORCE SPENT IN OCEAN

Tremblor Is Felt in Alaska—Misses
California

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 25.—Fears that a major catastrophe might have resulted as the aftermath of a violent earthquake which was recorded on seismographs yesterday, were partly dispelled today when reports received from Alaska indicated that the tremor centered in the north Pacific.

Experts at the University of California also were of the opinion that the tremor centered in north Pacific waters about 200 miles south of the island of Kodiak.

Although the quake was felt in various sections of Alaska, no serious damage was done at any of these points.

SITKA, Alaska, Oct. 25.—A heavy quake was felt here yesterday. The first one, which was the strongest, was followed by a series of lesser ones which lasted for ten minutes.

Walls of a few houses were cracked and a number of dishes were broken by the force of the quake.

The tremor appeared to be more violent to the north of Chignik and Soapstone Point, where water pipes and windows were broken.

INJUNCTIONS HALT MAYOR

Thumbs Down On Lowden

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—The gory business of killing off—or attempting to kill off—presidential candidates has begun in earnest. The first to feel the axe is that of ex-Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, who at this stage of the game is one of the quartette of principal contenders for the Republican nomination next June. He has been regarded as "The Farmer's candidate" because of his unflinching work in the co-operative marketing field for the past six years.

A little group of grain-belt senators, not without influence in their respective states, have just concluded a series of conferences here and the verdict has been thumbs down on Lowden. Sitting in these conferences were Borah of Idaho, Brookhart of Iowa, Frazier of North Dakota, Norris of Nebraska, Nye of North Dakota, and McMaster of South Dakota.

No public announcement was made of the Lowden decision reached, but the significant announcement was made that Senator Norris would be backed for the nomination by progressive elements throughout the grain belt.

It has been of this same grain belt that Lowden's supporters have been looking for the major part of his strength.

Gov. Adam McMullen of Nebraska, already a candidate on record as stating that Nebraska will send a Lowden delegation to the Republican convention. Yesterday, the Nebraska governor was challenged by Senator Borah to state whether he would oppose the sending of a Norris-instructed delegation from Nebraska. The inquiry is calculated to place Gov. McMullen in an embarrassing position before the voters of his state.

LISBON PREPARING WELCOME FOR RUTH ELDER AND AVIATOR

American Minister To Greet Flyers When
Ship Docks

LISBON, Oct. 25.—All was in readiness today for an enthusiastic welcome to be tendered Miss Ruth Elder, pretty American aviatrix, and her flying companion, George Haldeman, who are expected to arrive here aboard the Portuguese steamer Lima from the Azores this afternoon.

The Lima is expected to arrive shortly after five o'clock. Frederick Dearnley, American Minister to Portugal, will greet the fliers, and the celebration is expected to outdo any public welcome ever accorded a visitor to this city.

According to present plans, a fleet of airplanes will roar over the harbor when the Lima steams in, as a tribute to the aviators, and the fliers will be feted by government officials and air circles during their stay here.

Miss Elder and Haldeman plan to fly from this city to Paris. The Portuguese government has been busy for the last week in preparing a suitable reception to the fliers, and the celebration is expected to outdo any public welcome ever accorded a visitor to this city.

PRISONERS IMPERILED WHEN FLAMES SWEEP BRIDEWELL JAIL

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—Twenty-five hundred prisoners in the Bridewell were periled early today by a fire which swept through the two-story administration building.

The flames caused damage of $400,000.

A panic among the prisoners was narrowly averted. Guards went from cell to cell reassuring the inmates while firemen battled the flames. Nearly 200 of the prisoners are women.

All available policemen were called to the scene and stood guard until the blaze was brought under control. The fire started in the laundry room, but its origin is unknown.

TRUAX SAYS BANKS MAY BECOME "LAND POOR" FROM MORTGAGES

State Agriculture Director Issues Warning To American Bankers—Says Banks Will Feel Farmers' Trouble

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 25.—Warning that the conditions prevailing in the agricultural industry will eventually result in financial institutions becoming "land poor" through enforced ownership of farm lands upon which they hold mortgages, Charles V. Truax, director of the Ohio State Department of Agriculture, spoke before the convention of the American Bankers' Association here today.

"I am speaking to the bankers of America," said Truax. "I am going to speak as a plain, blunt man. If the present plight of American agriculture is permitted to continue, it will not be long before the financial institutions, who have loaned twelve and a half billions of dollars on mortgages to the farmers, will own the lands, or a large part of them, and when they own these lands, many of the financial institutions themselves will be as nearly bankrupt as the farmers are.

"This is the history of scores of banks in the western states, and it is the cloud which is moving eastward at an alarming rate. In Ohio, we know of banks that are in positive distress, because of the ownership of land. Our banking officials and our government officials, who have supervision over banks, know this to be true. It can, will, and shall be remedied. Until recently, the people of this country have not appreciated the need of farm relief. We farmers are poor press agents, and it was years before we succeeded in telling our story to the country.

"It is a story which does not concern the farmers, as such, alone, and that is a newer phase of the question which we must present. It concerns the banks, not alone as holders of loans on farms, not alone as the involuntary owners of farms or land, but it concerns nearly every business or manufacturing institution that deals with farmers, either directly or indirectly, which has felt the plight of the economic depression in America. The banks, which in turn have dealt with these establishments, have felt it, and I make the prediction, will feel it increasingly month by month, and year by year, unless American agriculture is given a fair opportunity with the manufacturer, with labor, with transportation, with public utilities, and with every group of people who are touched by government.

"This is the message that we have to tell. We tell it plainly, frankly and as appealingly as we are able. We tell it to you, because it is your message as well as ours."

MRS. KRESGE FILES SUIT FOR DIVORCE FROM MILLIONAIRE

Action Follows Suit For
Separation Filed Recently

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The marital dispute between Sebastian S. Kresge, millionaire chain store head, and his wife, Mrs. Doris M. Kresge, became further involved today as the result of a new action for divorce filed here by Mrs. Kresge.

The divorce action followed a suit for separation which Mrs. Kresge filed some time ago. Kresge had previously sued his wife for a divorce in Michigan, but recently agreed to withhold proceedings in that case pending a final determination as to the jurisdiction of the New York courts over his matrimonial litigation.

The new divorce action was disclosed when a notice was filed by Olcott, Ernest and Ernest, attorneys for Mrs. Kresge, that the case was to be placed on the calendar for Nov. 7. Notice was given by Max D. Steuer, counsel for Kresge, that the case would be defended and that dismissal of the action would be sought.

The attorneys declined to disclose the details in the divorce action, or the charges made by Mrs. Kresge.

No complaint in the action has yet been filed. Attorneys for Mrs. Kresge, however, said it was served recently on the defendant.

GOVERNOR HURT

LANSING, Mich., Oct. 25.—Gov. Fred W. Green was one of the first state casualties of the new hunting season today when he was bruised and shaken in an automobile accident near Portland, while returning from shooting pheasants.

EASTERN STAR IN MEETING AT TOLEDO

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 25.—Eight thousand members of the Order of Eastern Star were gathering here today to attend the opening session of the three day state convention tonight. The first session is to be held at the Coliseum and will be presided over by J. Ernest Teare, most worthy Grand Patron, of Cleveland.

Elections are to be held Wednesday afternoon.

COAST GUARD PLANES SEEK FLOATING BOOZE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—There is so much whiskey and alcohol floating off the eastern coast that the coast guard is sinking it with machine gun fire from airplanes.

Official reports today showed that a coast guard plane, operating off Cape Cod, swooped down on 100 cases of innocent whiskey, bobbing up and down on the waves, and with a heavy machine gun barrage, sent them to the bottom.

In another air reconnaissance 150 cases were sighted floating within a radius of a mile. Some of the liquor was dispatched by machine gun fire from the plane. Coast guard patrol boats were summoned by radioophone to dispose of the remainder.

Specimens picked up showed that the wet goods were of foreign origin, evidently intended for the American bootleg market.

"If the whales get drunk enough to attack trans-Atlantic liners only the coast guard can be blamed," said a treasury wag.

"The ocean soon will be of sufficient alcoholic content to violate the Volstead Act, in which case it probably will be padlocked."

Enough liquor is floating around off the eastern coast to supply the New York night clubs for some time. Officials attribute the condition chiefly to the heavy storm along the eastern seaboard. Several rum schooners lurking outside the twelve mile limit are believed to have gone down with loss of life.

A large quantity of liquor also is heaved into the ocean by rum running speed boats when pursued by coast guard craft.

ATTORNEYS ALLEGE DESTROYING BOOKS WOULD BE UNLAWFUL

Suits Produce New Angle
In Case To Oust
McAndrew

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—Chicago's war against Great Britain, led by "Mayor General" William Hale Thompson, had spread over additional fronts today. Sporadic firing was reported from various sectors.

A spirited battle took place in circuit court here when two petitions were filed to restrain the mayor and his assistants from destroying library books said to contain pro-British propaganda.

Edward J. Bohac and J. Kentner Elliott, two Chicago attorneys, were the men who, acting in their rights as "citizens and taxpayers," filed the injunctions to restrain the "destruction of public property."

The controversy arose from efforts to oust Superintendent of Schools William McAndrew, who, Mayor Thompson charges, has been spreading British influence in the schools. It is charged that McAndrews used history textbooks which reflected on American Revolutionary heroes.

The school book inquiry inspired the charge that many pro-British books were on the shelves of the Chicago public library. Mayor Thompson then ordered the library searched, stating that all suspicious volumes would be collected on the lakefront and burned.

In his plea for a restraining order, Citizen Bohac declared the destruction of these books would be a dangerous precedent, that it would be a precedent for destruction of more books.

Both suits set forth that the citizens have an equity in the books, since they were purchased with taxpayers' money, that burning of them would constitute destruction of public property without due process of law.

"The only parallel to this bonfire proposal," said Citizen Bohac, "is in the burning of the libraries of Carthage and Constantinople, which caused irreparable damage to civilization."

The lakefront bonfire was temporarily halted to await ruling on the injunction suits. U. J. "Sport" Hermann, a trustee of the library and named by Mayor Thompson as high executioner in carrying out the work of destruction, agreed to await the courts decision and to be governed accordingly.

Investigation and selection of the books to be thus consumed was delegated to the library administration committee at a meeting yesterday at the library trustees' home.

Robert Roden, head librarian, said it would be a "pity" to destroy the suspected volumes, and suggested that they be segregated in a cage where they could be read by trained historians who would not be likely to be influenced by their contents.

Superintendent McAndrew was absent from the city yesterday and his trial was continued until today.

MRS. GRAYSON WAITS ARRIVAL OF NEW MOTOR FOR OCEAN PLANE

OLD ORCHARD, Me., Oct. 25.—A new motor for "The Dawn", the amphibian plane in which Mrs. Frances Grayson made three unsuccessful attempts to fly across the Atlantic ocean to Denmark, was expected to arrive here today.

The new motor will replace the one which was disabled Sunday when the plane was off Sable Island on its last attempt to make the flight. After an inspection of the engine, T. Harold Kincaid, Wright Aeronautical Company expert, reported its condition to the builders of the plane, who then decided to install a new motor.

No decision concerning the future itinerary of "The Dawn" will be made until she has had a conference with pilot Wilbur E. Stultz and navigator Brice Goldsborough on the feasibility of another trans-Atlantic attempt this year. Mrs. Grayson said this morning. A conference scheduled for yesterday afternoon failed to materialize, but is expected to be held sometime today.

In the event that the attempt to span the Atlantic is abandoned for this year, it is believed the plane will be taken back to Roosevelt Field, Long Island, until next spring.

HERE'S AMERICA'S "AVERAGE MAN"

Roy L. Gray has been picked as the "most average man" of the United States, after a nation-wide canvass. He lives in Fort Madison, Iowa, incidentally selected as the "most average city" in the land, and the citizens of that town nominated him as their "most average" representative.

EVEN THE MAYOR!

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—"Quit? Why I haven't begun to fight." Thus spoke Mayor William Hale Thompson today when asked about his drive to rid library shelves of "pro-British books."

When told that his answer quoted Admiral Nelson, a famous Britisher, Mayor Thompson laughingly remarked: "Well, there were some good things about the British at that."

FARMER KILLS SELF BY FIRING SHOT GUN CHARGE INTO HEART

J. W. Matthews, Jamestown Pike, Ends Life
Tuesday Morning

James W. Matthews, 57, farmer, living on the Arch Anderson farm, Xenia, R. R. 2, two and one-half miles east of Xenia on the Jamestown Pike, committed suicide shortly after 7 o'clock Tuesday morning by firing a shot gun charge into his heart.

The act is attributed by members of his family to despondency, caused by ill health.

Matthews made complete preparations to end his life. Waiting until he was alone in the house and members of the family were outside, he locked himself in his upstairs bedroom, leaving the key in the lock.

He attached a short length of twine around his right foot and tied the other end to the trigger of the shot gun. Slitting upright in bed, he held the barrel of the gun against his heart with the right hand and kicked his foot, firing the gun.

The entire load penetrated the heart. He fired at such close range a part of the thumb on his right hand was also blown off. Death was instantaneous.

Matthews left a note on a stand at the foot of his bed, unaddressed and unsigned and written with a lead pencil on the reverse side of a business letter. It said:

"Pardon me for this rash act. I have good will to everyone. I cannot stand it any longer. Jenny look after my affairs. Goodbye." Jenny is his widow.

Members of the family heard the shot. Finding the door to his bedroom locked, they notified Dr. Frank M. Chambliss, coroner.

Dr. Chambliss was forced to climb a tree, crawl over the roof of the residence and let himself in to the room through a window. No inquest will be held, he said.

Coroner Chambliss learned that Matthews had been in failing health and had not been permitted by his family to exert himself by working on the farm. No other reason except for despondency, induced by poor health, could be ascribed for the act.

He is survived by his widow, Jenny, three sons, Raymond, near Xenia, and Howard and Ralph Matthews, at home and one daughter, Mrs. Mary Lewis, Xenia. Two sisters, two brothers and one half brother also survive: Oren, Xenia; Grant, Mowestown, O.; Mrs. Martha Griffith, New Jasper; Mrs. Samuel McConaughy, Brewertown, Ind. and Milton Matthews, near Xenia.

Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Trinity M. E. Church, of which he was a member. Burial arrangements have not been made. Friends may call at the home any time Wednesday evening.

The Matthews public sale, announced for Wednesday, has been postponed until further notice.

PRESIDENT WILL BE SUCCESSOR TO GARY MAGAZINE WILL SAY

Forbes Says Morgan May Be Finance Committee
Head

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—James A. Farrell, 64, president and operating head of the United States Steel Corporation for seventeen years will succeed the late Judge Gary as chairman of this mighty world-wide enterprise the November issue of Forbes Magazine will announce, it was made known today.

J. P. Morgan, long a power in world finance, may accept the post of chairman of the corporation's finance committee—a position also filled by Gary—according to B. C. Forbes, financial editor. If Morgan declines some other prominent banker will be appointed.

The banker chosen will be expected to devote his entire time to the colossal task of financing a concern doing a two billion dollar annual business, it was said.

Rumor that either George H. Baker, Sr., or his son, George, Jr., would be tendered the appointment was spiked by Forbes, who declared the elder Baker is lightning rather than increasing his business, so that the younger financier has far too many problems, present and future, to tackle the steel post.

Farrell gained his power in the corporation nearly twenty years ago by his extraordinarily successful record in developing foreign business, it was recalled in the article. He was told of his elevation to the presidency by J. P. Morgan, seventeen years ago, after Morgan had been deeply impressed by Farrell's activities in foreign fields as head of the United States Steel Products Company, a subsidiary.

At the offices of the steel corporation, the statement that an "official announcement as to Gary's successor has been made," was reiterated this morning. A quarterly meeting of the board of directors is scheduled for this afternoon.

Farrell authorized the following statement: "It is my understanding that no action as to the selection of a successor to Judge Gary will be taken until the November meeting of the board of directors."

CONSOLIDATION OF CHURCHES URGED AT PASTORS' MEETING

Law Enforcement Is Considered At Meet In Columbus

COLUMBUS, Oct. 25.—Consolidation of churches in over-church communities, a study of marriage and divorce, betterment of motion pictures, and educational activities, local law enforcement against gambling, indecent literature and prohibition laws were being considered here today by more than 100 pastors of the assembly or governing body, of the Ohio Council of Churches.

The meeting, at which arrangements are being made for the 1928 Ohio Pastors Convention and the Seventh Annual School for Rural Pastors, opened late Monday and will be concluded today, following election of officers.

Dr. John M. Moore, New York general secretary of the Federal Council of Churches; Rev. B. F. Lamb, executive secretary of the Ohio Council of Churches, and Myers V. Cooper, president of the Ohio organization were the chief speakers Monday.

"The real difficulty with organized Christianity today lies in the new conditions of our times," said Dr. Moore at the Monday night dinner, "which are not being adequately met by the church. Nor will they be met until we achieve a fuller expression of Christian unity. That unity is beginning to make itself felt more strongly in such cooperative movements as the Ohio Council which has made such outstanding progress."

YOUTH KILLED IN FRIENDLY SCUFFLE

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 25.—Edwin Fisher, 10, lies dead here today, victim of a friendly scuffle with a school chum over a revolver late Monday afternoon.

When he refused, the scuffle ensued, he said, and young Fisher was shot through the neck.

He died before he could be removed. The Harnett boy was exonerated, led to a hospital.

NEW YORK UNDERWORLD SEEKS SUCCESSOR TO GHETTO CZAR

LITTLE AUGIE ORGAN, NEW YORK'S GHETTO CZAR, AND HIS UPTOWN APARTMENT HOME

By WILLIAM H. RITT

Staff Writer for Central Press and The Gazette

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Gangland is looking for a new boss; the last one was murdered the other night.

Little Augie Organ, born Jacob Organ, wasn't satisfied with being the czar of New York's ghetto and being the big boy of a very bad bunch of "bimbos."

Little Augie, flush with coin, thought he had outgrown the turf-moll and toughness of the lower east side.

Augie wanted to become high hat and he wanted his name to get ritzy, too.

High Hate Barred.

But gangland won't be high hat—or hatted.

Augie found that out. Squirming to his death in a dirty gutter on Norfolk St., a bullet in his head, Augie found it out.

And now gangland would have a new boss. There will be many aspirants. There always are, though, in gangland, as in recent Mexico, rulers rarely walk out of office. Impeachment by gun. That's the rule.

Little Augie rose to rulership when it was decided that the notorious "Kid" Dropper had ruled the gangs too long. The Kid was hardly in the morgue before the gangs were acclaiming Augie.

As a boss Little Augie did well. Too well. He was smart. He was always in the know. He never failed to collect. But with prosperity came an urge in Augie for better things, bigger game, and a bigger life.

So Augie went up-town with his 21-year-old wife. To a ritzy apartment house on 106 St., west side, went Augie.

Augie Tasted Life.

The apartment house gleams with white stone and polished brass. A giant doorman beckons a cab at your command. Inside is cut glass, silver and rich linen. There are potted plants and a softly moving elevator.

This was life to Augie and he attempted to raise his activities to the level of his home.

The gang leader was seldom seen in his old haunts.

It was easy for the old gangs to grow suspicious. Could Augie be turning in his old fellows, turning stool pigeon? That's foolish—but gangsters often are stupid.

Augie and his buddy, Jack "Big Boy" Diamond went for a stroll along the old haunts on Norfolk.

In the usual hub bub of chattering women about the push carts, squawking children and the hilarity of drunken celebrants, came several sharp shots, and both Augie and Diamond dropped.

Police carried Diamond to a hospital, desperately wounded, and Augie—to the morgue.

Gangland is looking for a new boss.

BOY NOT INFANTILE PARALYSIS VICTIM

Through a misunderstanding in a telephone conversation with relatives of Phillip Watkins, 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Watkins, near New Burlington have believed the child was suffering from infantile paralysis, but the disease has been found to be spinal meningitis. The boy had been ill several weeks and was taken last week to the Dayton Hospital and inquiry into the cause of his condition led to the misunderstanding over the telephone. His condition is critical.

EGG SHIPPING Ohio poultrymen who ship eggs to New York during November, December, and February have gained less than at any other time of year, analysis of New York and Ohio egg prices for the past four years by the rural economics department at the Ohio State University indicates. V. R. The World And All POWER FROM DEEP HOLES The British Association for the Advancement of Science seems to be taking quite seriously the proposal of John L. Hodgson, that deep holes be dug or bored into the earth's crust in search of heat for cheap power. I have been looking for the sneering comments that usually greet scientific proposals that are somewhat in advance of the hour, but have seen none in print.

Of course, the proposal is not strictly new. Imaginative men, both among scientists and among the literary folk, have long toyed with the problem of the world's future supply of cheap power. Harnessing the tides of the Bay of Fundy is one of the most ambitious of the projects that has been seriously studied by scientists. This idea of digging a deep hole and using the earth's heat to create cheap power is possibly more ambitious and more speculative than the Fundy tide project. But it appeals strongly to the creative imagination.

Mr. Hodgson, who is an engineer of high standing in his profession, suggests sinking shafts to a probable depth of five miles. He estimates that a hole five miles deep might cost about thirty million dollars. Of course that isn't much money to invest in a power plant, if a source of cheap power is to be tapped.

In Italy there are two or three places where factories are actually run by steam generated by heat from volcanic fires. Comparatively shallow shafts have tapped the perpetual heat, and those factories have solved the fuel problem.

Mr. Hodgson presumes that at a depth of five miles there will be sufficient heat to run a power plant of unprecedented dimensions. Once the hole is dug, the fuel problem of a community of millions of people might be solved for a period of many centuries.

Thirty million dollars is a considerable sum of money. Perhaps there is no individual in the world who could afford to spend that

Care of Babies

This baby has never had a day's sickness and never a cross or fretful spell that lasted an hour. And what do you suppose is responsible for this healthy, happy condition? Not diet, for he has eaten just about anything and everything a child could eat. Not drugs, for he has not been dosed with opiates; he has never had a drop of paregoric. Nor has his sensible mother ever made him taste castor oil or prospective mother. So, remember; tell your druggist you wish Fletcher's Castoria.

One word of warning; get the pure real Castoria. Fletcher's Castoria is the original. It is the kind doctors specify. And with every bottle comes a book on "Care and Feeding of Babies" that is worth its weight in gold to any mother or prospective mother. So, remember; tell your druggist you wish Fletcher's Castoria.

Children Cry for Fletcher's CASTORIA

The secret of this complete freedom from the many ills and upsets so common to infants? Plain old-fashioned Castoria. A million and more mothers swear by Castoria, and no wonder! A few drops and an approaching fever, colic, diarrhea or constipation seems to vanish in thin air. Castoria is purely vegetable; that is why physicians

R. Hayes Hamilton Will Wed Eastern Girl

Announcement of the engagement of Mr. R. Hayes Hamilton, son of Mrs. Mary E. Hamilton, 847 N. King St., to Miss Eva May Ormon, Boston, Mass., was made to thirty-four guests at a dinner at the Hotel Alexandria, West Alexandria, O., Monday night.

What was believed to be a dinner party arranged by Mr. Hamilton in celebration of his return home after spending the summer at Lenox, Mass., developed into an announcement party at which Miss Ormon chose to make the engagement known to Mr. Hamilton's friends.

Guests, including members of Mr. Hamilton's family, were completely surprised by the announcement, the secret having been kept since Mr. Hamilton's return from the East, when Miss Ormon accompanied him and became the guest of his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hamilton, of West Alexandria.

Guests were seated at tables arranged in U-shape, handsomely decorated in keeping with the autumn season with chrysanthemums and autumn foliage. A four-course dinner was served during which Miss Ormon was seated among the guests. As the dinner drew to a close, nut shells were passed in which each guest read his fortune.

The "fortune" of Miss Helen Hamilton, Troy, announced the engagement and Miss Ormon then took her place beside Mr. Hamilton. Place cards showed scenes around the Hotel Aspinwall, Lenox, Mass., where the romance which developed into the engagement announcement developed. Mr. Hamilton has been connected with the Aspinwall for two summer seasons and during the winters has been affiliated with the Hotel Princess Hamilton, Bermuda. Previously he was connected with the Saratoga, Saratoga, N. Y., in the Adirondacks, and the Hotel Raymond, Pasadena, and has been widely known as creator of the Hamilton Travelogues, as a lecturer on American scenic spots and in public work.

Miss Ormon is the daughter of Mr. James L. Ormon, Boston. She expects to remain here with Mr. Hamilton during the month he will spend at home before leaving for Hamilton, Bermuda, for the winter. The date of their marriage has not been divulged.

Guests at the announcement dinner were: Mr. and Mrs. John Baldwin, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Praver, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Schuyler McClellan, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Higgins, Mr. Charles Hamilton, Mrs. J. Agnew DeHaven, the Misses Lois Babb, Helen Dadds, Elsie and Helen Kennedy, May Orr, Messrs. Horace E. Prince, Vic Kolb, William Gowdy, Arthur Garfield and Raymond Shumaker, of Xenia; Mrs. W. J. Smith, Dayton; Mrs. L. J. Gagner, Yellow Springs; Mr. and Mrs. Larry Kennedy, Middletown; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Little, Richmond, Ind.; Miss Helen Hamilton, Troy; Mrs. Frederick Hamilton, Columbus; Miss Marie Shepard, and Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hamilton, West Alexandria, Miss Ormon and Mr. Hamilton.

MEMBER OF PIONEER XENIA FAMILY HERE TO REMOVE GRAVES

A mission of sentiment, the removal of the bodies of ten relatives from the family burial plot on the Towler Road to Woodland Cemetery, brought Silas H. Towler, commander of the Minnesota Soldiers' Home, Minneapolis, to Xenia for a day's visit, Monday.

Mr. Towler is a member of a family well known among Greene County pioneers and the family farm was where the city sewer farm is now located. Members of the family were buried on the family plot on the farm, the last interment being made in 1874. Mr. Towler came to Xenia and purchased a lot in Woodland Cemetery and the bodies of the ten relatives will be moved immediately from the family burial ground.

Mr. Towler is the son of Dr. Thomas S. Towler, pioneer Xenia physician. He is now eighty-two years of age but remarkably preserved and remembers many incidents of his childhood on the Towler farm. The family left Greene County when he was a lad of eleven years.

While in Xenia, Mr. Towler visited at the home of L. S. Barnes, E. Second St., with whom he became acquainted while both were attending the National A. R. encampment at Grand Rapids, Mich., this summer. Mr. Towler told Mr. Barnes at that time of his intended mission to Xenia, and Mr. Barnes recalled the days when he had played on the former Towler farm, when a boy.

Mr. Towler's grandfather was the first postmaster of Xenia and the family was prominent in the early history of the city.

Better than Soda

Hereafter, instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips."

CORONER RESERVES VERDICT IN INQUEST INTO BEACHAN DEATH

Testimony of nine witnesses was heard at an inquest conducted Tuesday morning by Coroner Frank M. Chambliss into the death of Ephraim Beachan, 40, colored, Birmingham, Ala., who was fatally shot by Fred O. Ligeance, Pennsylvania Railroad detective in the East End railway yards the night of October 17.

Detective Ligeance had said he shot in self-defense when the negro resisted an attempt to place him under arrest after being caught stealing coal.

The inquest was held in the office of Miss Elsie Canby, court stenographer, in the County Court. Opening at 9 o'clock, the inquiry lasted two hours and one-half. Coroner Chambliss reserved a verdict until he has an opportunity to go over the evidence. Transcription of testimony will not be available until the middle of next week and a verdict will not be delivered until some time later.

Dr. W. A. Galloway, railway surgeon, testified at the inquest that Beachan, in a dying statement made at McClelland Hospital, admitted to him that he had been "taking coal."

The inquest was conducted in the presence of five or six representatives of the city, who were present for the invitation of Coroner Chambliss. A sack of coal, dropped by Beachan before the struggle with the detective, was admitted as evidence.

Other witnesses who testified, included: Detective Ligeance, who had a tooth knocked out in the struggle; Patrolman J. E. Craig; Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman; William Robinson, colored; Samuel Cundiff, railroad detective; Lieutenant of Railroad Police Hussmeyer, Jennie Humphrey, colored and a man named Brennan.

Detective Cundiff and Hussmeyer testified regarding the appearance and physical condition of Ligeance after the tussle with the colored man.

POWER FROM DEEP HOLES

The British Association for the Advancement of Science seems to be taking quite seriously the proposal of John L. Hodgson, that deep holes be dug or bored into the earth's crust in search of heat for cheap power.

Of course the proposal is not strictly new. Imaginative men, both among scientists and among the literary folk, have long toyed with the problem of the world's future supply of cheap power. Harnessing the tides of the Bay of Fundy is one of the most ambitious of the projects that has been seriously studied by scientists. This idea of digging a deep hole and using the earth's heat to create cheap power is possibly more ambitious and more speculative than the Fundy tide project. But it appeals strongly to the creative imagination.

Mr. Hodgson, who is an engineer in high standing in his profession, suggests sinking shafts to a probable depth of five miles. He estimates that a hole five miles deep might cost about thirty million dollars. Of course that isn't much money to invest in a power plant, if a source of cheap power is to be tapped.

In Italy there are two or three places where factories are actually run by steam generated by heat from volcanic fires. Comparatively shallow shafts have tapped the perpetual heat, and those factories have solved the fuel problem.

Mr. Hodgson presumes that at a depth of five miles there will be sufficient heat to run a power plant of unprecedented dimension. Once the hole is dug, the problem of a community of millions of people might be solved for a period of many centuries.

Thirty million dollars is a considerable sum of money. Perhaps there is no individual in the world who could afford to spend that much money digging a deep hole at a venture.

But a thousand individuals might be found who would be willing to undertake the project collectively, if scientific sanction were strongly behind the enterprise.

GREAT TRANSPORTATION SYSTEMS

Few realize the magnitude of the pipe line system that has been built by the oil industry to transport the crude oil from producing wells to refineries where it is turned into kerosene, gasoline, asphalt, naphtha, etc.

The pipe-line system is very much like a railroad system; it has trunk lines, gathering lines or feeders, terminals, storage yards, switching systems, pumping stations, dispatchers, telegraphs and telephones.

The pipe, of from 4 to 12 inches or even greater, is laid commonly about 18 inches under ground; deeper in cold regions. At intervals of usually about 40 miles, are pumping stations to push the oil along. An 8-inch line can deliver about 21,000 barrels a day. It works much like a city water man, except that the pipe line may extend half across the continent.

The pipe-line system handles annually an amount of petroleum that in tank cars would make up a train 40,000 miles long. There is about a mile of pipe line for every three miles of railroad.

We are urged to brace up and weather the storms, but most people are more inclined to storm at the weather.

The Way of the World

GETTING WHAT THEY WANT

W. J. Bryan used to be fond of saying "the people can have what they want." He was talking about politics and democracy. The people get what they want in lines which have nothing to do with politics and democracy. They wanted more silk than there was silk to be had. Cotton wouldn't satisfy. And now the artificial silk industry uses 150,000 tons of wood pulp in one year. The people can have what they want because they can depend on the devotion to knowledge of a few.

RECREATION

The value of the motion picture lies in its power to carry us for an hour into an unreal world. For a time we participate in adventures that will never thrill us in reality. That is recreation. It is getting away from the worries and the perplexities of the day. Unfortunately some pictures put over a sadly mistaken idea of life. Such pictures are no good. They are misleading to youth, and disgusting to a generation that knows better. But clean, lively, humorous pictures furnish real recreation, for they furnish an easy and legitimate escape from some of the unpleasant realities of life.

UP AND ON

The year 1900 isn't so long ago. Stanley Homes, Jersey man, was then an apprentice in a shop. Today he is at the head of the second largest telephone shop in the world—the Western Electric plant at Kearney, N. J. Ultimately 20,000 men will work there. Stanley Homes had a chance. Today's office boy has a chance. You have a chance. We all have a chance. That's the big thing about this democracy of ours. We have a chance. What are we going to do with it?

JUST DIRT

More than $14,000,000 worth of dirt was sold last year. In other words, nearly 4,000,000 tons of clay were mined and sold by producers in this country. Harper Leech, in the Chicago Tribune, tells the story of clay—clay made into brick and tile and pottery.

It's all dirt—just dirt. Day by day we pass by scores of things that seem worthless. We brush by opportunities without a second look. Just dirt. We don't lack ability, when we once get our hands on something, but we lack imagination to see what a thing MIGHT BE. There is a story in the common clay that is finally sold for fourteen millions.

The Daybook
OF A
New Yorker
By
Burton Rascoe

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The colored skyscraper will be, in New York, shortly, as much a part of the scene as the brown stone front was at the end of the last century. Of course the American Radiator people started the fad, with their bold stripings of black and gold. Various buildings along Fifth avenue, from Forty-second street to the beginning of Central Park, are capped with faint hints of pastels. Others have their top layers illuminated by night, and my architectural scout tells me the terra cotta people are working overtime, preparing for the demand to come for bright colors for skyscrapers.

A woman friend, who lives within ear-splitting distances of some mysterious uptown excavation, has taken this means to provide herself with some solitude. Every morning early she leaves her apartment in her little sedan, and drives away up to a quiet street in the Bronx, near the parkway. Here she parks, brings out the books and manuscripts she is working on, and spends tranquil uninterrupted hours. It has been a splendid haven during the bright weather we've had all autumn, but with November rain imminent, I am afraid she will have to abandon her de luxe cinsing and give herself up to the tortures of apartment house noises again.

Men's clothing stores are putting out pocket flasks that look like Dunhill lighters, except, of course, that they are three times the size. And drug stores sell boxes of tiny red-tipped sticks that look like matches, but are nothing in the world but minute lipsticks, to be thrown away after one using. It has always seemed to me that one of life's most futile occupations was thinking up devices that look like what they're not. Camouflage in peacetime is just plain silliness. Even as a child, I had a violent aversion to chairs which, when sat on, produced tinkling, Swiss music-box sounds.

In case you're interested in the early history of that oasis for all good Bohemians, Greenwich Village, let me tell you that Washington Square itself was once a large plantation divided by the Minetta Brook. This latter meandering stream (for which the lane of rickety houses is also named) flowed into the Hudson on the line approximately marked by the present Charlton and Downing streets.

The Kleinberger Galleries, formerly of upper Fifth avenue, has moved into a swaggy new Gothic establishment at No. 12 East Fifty-fourth street, and is offering, as the first show in the new shop, a loan exhibition of French primitives. The value of these paintings, about sixty in number, runs easily into the millions. Jean Cocteau's portrait of Charlotte, daughter of Francis I, has been lent by Max Epstein of Chicago. Belasco himself might have designed the bright-as-day lighting in the main gallery. A glass ceiling, or skylight, is lit behind with bulbs which afford a glow almost exactly like that of noonday. Here, then, if one is interested in such matters, may be observed also Mr. Otto Kahn's valued "St. George and the Dragon," by Jean Bellegambe; Jean Fouquet's portrait of Louis IX, lent by Colonel Michael Friedsam; and various other panels, bits of rare Limoges china, and what-not.

Brown Bread—Three cups Graham flour, half cup sugar, two cups sour milk, one level teaspoon soda, one teaspoon salt.
When baking, invert a pan over your loaf and it steams the bread and makes it more moist. Sprinkle bran flakes on top with a little brown sugar and add raisins or prunes when you want it extra nice.

Suggestions

Browned Flour
It is a very great help in making gravy to have the flour already browned. This can be done by putting the flour into a baking pan, and setting it in the oven. The flour must not be left to burn. After it is the desired color, put away in jars. It is now ready for use in place of using all white flour. When making gravy or preparing a roast, add a little of the browned flour. It adds to appearance and taste.
Eggs in Disguise
Sometimes the little folks tire of the eggs they need so much. Try this way of serving them for a change. Just before taking the cooked cereal from the fire, break the egg into it and beat with a spoon till smooth. The egg will be cooked enough and gives the

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

The Old-Fashioned Girl

It's a bit pathetic to me when people try to make believe they are happy and contented without the natural attachments peculiar to their age. "Mother" may be the best pal in the world, but no mother can really take the place of young friends. The parents who try to keep the son or daughter away from other young people is selfish and making for unhappiness.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl 26 years old and never had a love affair. I don't really care for any man's friendship. Do you think I will find by Prince Charming? I love my dear mother, for she is the sweetest pal a girl can have. I have no girl or boy friend. Mother thinks if I go by myself I will not get with bad company. I sometimes feel lonesome but it is soon forgotten. Please help me if you can. A MISS."

You don't say what help you want, my dear, but I take it that you do want friends in spite of your assertion that you are quite content. A girl your age should be able to choose good friends, and while no one can take a mother's place every young person should have young friends. Don't be self-righteous, but make friends of both sexes and show your mother that you can be trusted.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I wish to say that I married for spite and am very unhappy. I will be married five years but have been separated from my husband for over a year. We just could not get along. I have completely fallen in love with another man. I am

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

What the Blood Stream Contributes to Beauty
Of all the beautifying agents inside and outside your body, no one of them alone can make you beautiful. But if I were to choose one to be placed at the top of the list, I should choose a pure, active blood stream.
Blood must be constantly flowing through your body to keep it alive. It must flow swiftly without obstruction to keep you full of energy and health. For when it slows down, it gets sluggish and impure just like a river. Probably you know that a running stream purifies itself every mile. If you take clear fresh water out of a running stream and leave it in a bucket, it is not long before it stagnates. It is just the same with the blood that is coursing through your body—it keeps pure by constantly moving. That is why stimulating the circulation is the fundamental principle of all bodily exercises. It is also the reason for the stimulants which are used to improve your complexion. They carry the blood to the surface so that it can nourish the cells and carry away the impurities that cause pimples and blemishes to appear on the skin. For the blood, as you know, is the carrier that brings nourishment and vitalizing elements to the tissues and the same time the scavenger which takes away the waste.

Besides its definite physiological effect upon your beauty—cleanliness and good color to your complexion, firmness of muscular tissue, etc.—your blood stream has a great deal to do with your disposition and this in turn reacts in the expression of your face. If your blood stream is congested, you have pain—This is one of the chief causes of headaches. If it is sluggish you feel "dull" and low in vitality, everything looks blue and you are dissatisfied with yourself and all around you. If it is pure and speeding through your system, taking plenty of nourishment to the cells and carrying away all the waste and dead tissue, you feel happy and light and gay, you have loads more energy and can do every task that is put before you better and more easily.
The first essential to a good blood stream is plenty of air and in my talk tomorrow I am going to discuss "Breathing Beauty into Your Face and Body."

Behind The Scenes
In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24. — Ex-Judge, ex-Senator and ex-Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall was picked, from the start, to do the job of the trial here, with Harry F. Sinclair, on a charge of conspiracy against the government in the matter of the Teapot Dome oil properties. That is to say, they were supposed to be oil properties.

Subsequent expert investigation is said to have revealed that there is not much oil about them. However, the original impression was that they were rich in it. At any rate Fall and Sinclair are in just as much trouble over them as if they were spouting it by the thousands of barrelsful.

Fall in Poor Health
That Fall would be the pathetic old man of the combination was evident from the moment the first juror was put into the box.

The role is one for which Sinclair is poorly adapted. He appears vigorous, bears all the marks of a hard-boiled capitalist, even an inch of him. If a doubt existed, at any stage of the game, that he is no object to inspire sympathy in a jury's bosom, wasn't it dispelled by the jury which convicted him of contempt of court a few months ago?

Fall, however, makes a pretty fair "poor old man." He's genuinely old. He's been sick probably the real thing, considering the situation in which he finds himself—for a year or two is as thin as a rail, and sits slumped down in his chair, looking discouraged and dejected, with his long, lean, bony, weather-beaten face, his sparse white hair, his snowy raven's wing mustache, of bygone frontier cut, and his brooding expression.

Not Called at First
Edward L. Doheny, who was acquitted, with Fall, on a criminal charge in connection with the Elk Hills' oil case, nearly a year ago, was perhaps even more pitiable than Fall. He not only looked older and feebler than Fall then, but he had his arm in a sling due to an infection. Doheny took the witness stand in person and told a bang-up story for the defense's purpose. He made himself and Fall out two typical old "pardners" of the sure-enough wild western days, as well as the interesting—full of yards about "diamond hitches," hash-slinging in mining camp restaurants, rattlesnakes, mule-skinning and all that kind of thing—but appealing, as well.

Fall was not called to the witness stand. The legal outfit includes some interesting personalities also. Major Peyton Gordon, the district attorney, defers a great deal to the government's special counsel, as well as the may, for aren't they the great Philadelphia luminary, Owen J. Roberts, and Alton Pomerene, ex-senator from Ohio, prominently mentioned on various occasions as a Democratic possibility for exalted an office as president?

Imposing Legal Array
Pomerene always was distinguished as the solemnest-visaged individual in the senate, and he lives up to it in the court room. Roberts has a trick of elevating his eyebrows, lowering his eyelids, and screwing his mouth down at the corners, into an expression of contempt for the opposition that breaks all records.

George G. Chandler, Roberts' assistant, undoubtedly knows more about the government's side of the oil cases than anybody living. Martin W. Littleton, to all intents and purposes, is chief of the defense's battery. George P. Hoover helps him, and Fall has his own independent team—William S. Leahy of Washington and Mark B. Thompson of New Mexico.

Littleton is a bulky, formidable-looking character, but for all that, his client, Sinclair was convicted and sentenced to months in jail when they tried him for contempt of court, whereas Frank J. Hogan, who did the lion's share of the fighting for Doheny, got his man and Fall, off scot-free.

Justice Frederick L. Siddons, who presides, is an Englishman by birth, but has lived here nearly all his life.

I Have Said in My Heart

By IDA H. McGLONE GIBSON

TAURUS
An erudite gentleman has taken issue with me on some of my editorials. He is opposed to women being anything except procurers and administrators to man's comfort and pleasure—mostly pleasure.

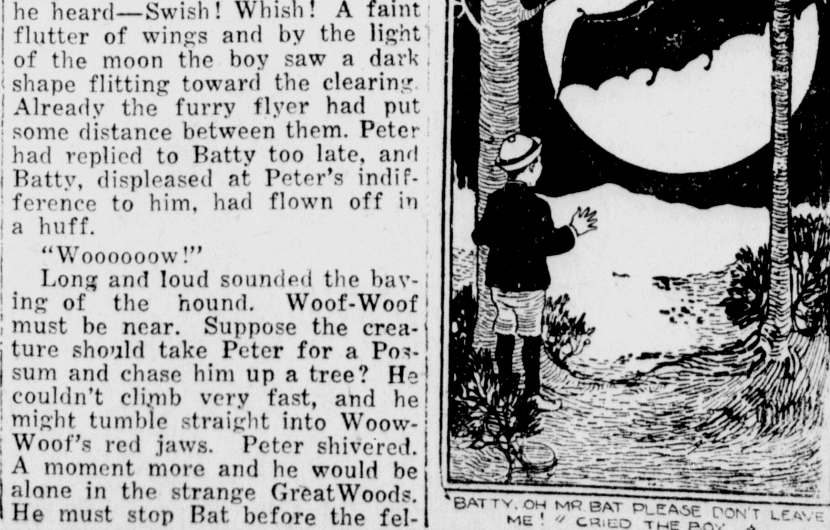

He seems to think that women are trying to imitate men. God forbid! What women are trying to do, however, is not to make the sex have their only stock in trade. They want to be judged by something else than their mere physical attraction.

He writes: "Particularly do I long for the day when women will be 'free from their present obsession of trying to imitate man in everything and return to her occupation of being feminine' (this of course, means to return to being purely the plaything of some Taurus of a man)." The sphere where she belongs, where she can have all the liberties she pleases. (This means only the liberties she can wheedle out of man through the prerogative of her sex.)

"However, if women must fight, let them use the original weapons which were the birthright of Mother Eve. They are dangerous enough, and women can do more shooting glances of their eyes (what about the cross-eyed woman? Will the gentleman tell me what will happen if she shoots both ways at once?) than playing with long-range rifles."

I venture that any decent thinking woman will consider the insult that this man has paid her sex at its full worth. Women discharge the duties of a human being the same qualities of judgment as do men. My dear sir, do you remember low flew quite out of sight. "Batty, Batty, ah, Mr. Bat, please don't leave me," cried Peter. "If you must fly, first show me the way out of the woods. Woof-Woof is coming. Fox and Skunk may be abroad. Who knows but a bear may be out for a stroll? I am lost. Bat, oh, Bat, please wait a minute!"

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent.

Batty Flies Off in a Huff
"Fine night, isn't it?" squeaked Batty, in a pleasant voice as he knew how.

"It's a fine night, I say!" repeated the furry flyer in a louder squeak, but still the boy paid no attention. Bat lost his temper.

"All right, young Two-Legs, don't speak, eep as silent as a cat by a rat-hole if you wish to! See if I care!"

Peter came to himself with a start. "Don't be cross, Batty. I am sorry if I have made you angry. But I didn't hear you. Ha, ha! Did you ever see such a sight in your life? Fourteen little Possums riding on one tail! What fun it must be to be carried off in a swing! How do you suppose those babies manage to hang on? I should think Mother Possum would shake them to the ground. She is going at a pretty fast pace, even for a possum, isn't she, Batty?"

Peter looked up. Nothing between him and the patch of starlit sky high above the tree-tops. Bat had been there just a second before. Where was he now? "Alone in the Great Woods!" gasped Peter. Even as he spoke he heard—Swish! Whisk! A faint flutter of wings and by the light of the moon the boy saw a dark shape flitting toward the clearing. Already the furry flyer had put some distance between them. Peter had replied to Batty too late, and Batty, displeased at Peter's indifference to him, had flown off in a huff.

"Woowoo!" Long and loud sounded the baying of the hound. Woof-Woof must be near. Suppose the creature should take Peter for a Possum and chase him up a tree? He couldn't climb very fast, and he might tumble straight into Woof-Woof's red jaws. Peter shivered. A moment more and he would be alone in the strange Great Woods. He must stop Bat before the fel-

PLANS FOR PAULLIN DITCH APPROVED BY COMMISSIONERS

County Commissioners have authorized the construction of a single county ditch, known as the Paullin ditch, located in Ross Twp., one and one-half miles in length, petitioned for some time ago by a number of land owners who expect to be benefited by drainage of their land.

Construction of two other single county ditches is also under consideration.

Technical obstacles have been cleared and commissioners at a recent final hearing, approved reports and schedules of County Surveyor W. J. Davis on the estimated assessments on claims for compensation and damages in connection with the proposed improvements.

Objections to the proposed assessments were filed by D. D. Bryan, J. P. Paullin, J. J. Taylor, William Taylor and E. R. Conner. Contract for construction of the ditch will be awarded at 10 a. m., November 14 by Surveyor Davis, who has been authorized to advertise for bids for material needed. Public bids, instead of sealed bids, will be received and considered separately for work and material.

Commissioners have decided that $3.15 will be assessed against land specifically benefited by the improvement and $78.07 will be assessed against the county for benefit to state and county roads. Other minor assessments will be made against political subdivisions benefited.

Owners of benefited land are to be given five years, as taxes are paid, in which to meet the assessments in semi-annual installments.

Bonds of the county will be issued and sold to finance the improvement in anticipation of the collection of the assessments. The bonds will bear five and one-half per cent rate of interest per year, payable semi-annually.

BOWLING

Fords stretched their lead in the Recreation League to three full games by winning two out of three games from the 1926-27 champion Greene County Lumber Co. quintet while the Lang Transfers were defeating the Los Ramos Cigars three straight games Monday night.

Fords created a new league record this season for total pins in three games, collecting 2,792. Moorehead topped the losers with a series of 602 while Gannon led the Fords with a 598 total.

The Los Ramos team, by losing three games, also lost second place in the league to Lanks. The former team was handicapped by the absence of several plays and palled to roll in its best form. F. Hornor led the Lang team and Anderson was best for the losers. Box score Ford-G. Co. L. Co. game:

ROBBERY SUSPECT ADMITS HE IS EX-CONVICT; IS STILL HELD

E. H. Fayre, 26, Clarksburg, W. Va., held at Police Headquarters as a suspect in connection with the holdup of The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., branch store at Main and West Sts., late Saturday night and the attempted hold-up of Ralph Chambliss, Cincinnati Ave., on W. Second St., the same night, has admitted, police say, to having served a term of four years in the West Virginia state penitentiary at Moundsville for conviction on a hold-up charge.

Fayre admitted that he was released from the penitentiary a year ago. He continues to deny, however, having been implicated in the two Xenia hold-ups.

Fayre told police that, accompanied by two companions, he drove to Xenia Saturday afternoon and left his touring car at a W. Main St., garage for repairs. They were to get the machine again Sunday morning.

The suspect declared his two companions later disappeared and he slept in the parked car on the street near the garage all night. He was arrested at 10:30 a. m. Sunday by Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman. Police think Fayre was one of three unmasked men who attempted to hold up Chambliss and that his two companions perpetrated the hold-up of J. A. Wipert and wife at the grocery store. Wipert is manager of the store.

Fayre declared that he and a friend had been traveling over the country and were en route home when they stopped in Xenia. A third man had been "picked up" on the road, he said.

Fayre had a 22 caliber revolver in his possession when arrested and cartridges to fit a 38 caliber revolver. He will probably be arraigned before Mayor John W. Pugh this week on a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

Police say that a check of license tags showed Fayre to be the actual owner of the car he was driving. Efforts are being made to locate Fayre's two companions who disappeared and a further check is being made on Fayre's movements since he arrived in Xenia.

POLICE UNCOVER VAST AMOUNT OF STOLEN PROPERTY AT HOUSE

Ownership of a cache of stolen goods uncovered by police in a raid on a house in Wilberforce Saturday afternoon, which had recently been rented by John Morgan, 33, colored, E. Market St., is gradually being established, according to Police Chief M. E. Graham.

A search of the residence disclosed not only a large quantity of household goods and clothing which had been stolen from the home of Andrew Darling, colored, E. Market St., last week, but many auto accessories and other articles, since also identified as stolen goods.

Morgan and Carl Lewis, 29, colored, a nephew of Morgan, who arrived at the residence after it had been entered and searched by police, are in custody at Police Headquarters and will probably be charged with burglary and larceny. Lewis is suspected of being an accomplice.

Morgan is said to have readily admitted a number of recent robberies.

Mr. and Mrs. Darling identified their property Monday and hauled a dray load back to their residence. Darling and his wife are employed at Wright aviation field, Fairfield, the latter as maid in the home of a lieutenant. They had been preparing to move to Fairfield and had partially packed their belongings. Returning last Thursday night, they found their home ransacked and looted.

Four room-size rugs, a feather tick, bed clothing, sheets and pillow cases, silverware, clothing owned by both, a gold watch and $40 worth of carpenter tools constituted the loot recovered.

Police say that ownership of other articles found in the house at Wilberforce is being rapidly established. James Hubbard and wife identified a shot gun, rain coat, two or three shirts, a suit and top coat as having recently been stolen from their residence. Several winter coats and two pair of new shoes are still missing, he said.

Two tires stolen in a recent robbery at the Frank W. Hughes Wrecking Co., Dayton Ave., were identified, but two are still missing. A deputy sheriff from Dayton was also in Xenia Monday and identified many articles as having been taken in recent robberies in Dayton and Beaver.

Police believe the house was rented recently by Morgan for the sole purpose of concealing stolen goods. The raid was conducted by Patrolmen Fred Jones, Charles Thompson, Ed Craig and George Robinson. Three cars were necessary to transfer the stolen goods to Police Headquarters.

ANTIOCH STATION WRAP SURRENDERS FEDERAL LICENSE

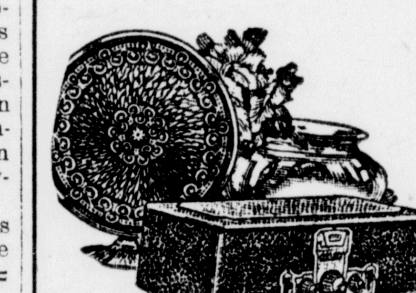

Radio broadcasting station WRAP at Antioch College, Yellow Springs, has voluntarily surrendered its license, it is announced.

The station has received the commendation of the Federal Radio Commission for having supplied such a good example to other stations.

In a letter to John G. Frayne, manager of the Antioch station, Chairman W. H. G. Bullard agrees with the former's contention that there are too many broadcasting stations in this country for the number of available channels and expressed the hope that the Yellow Springs station's withdrawal "will contribute in a small degree to improve the situation in that locality which it must be acknowledged, is still intolerable."

"The voluntary move for cancellation of your license is particularly pleasing," Bullard wrote, "as it will undoubtedly allow the commission to use this example in other cases similar to yours."

Should the situation later improve and the station wish for another license, its application will be sure to receive "very favorable consideration," Bullard added.

P.A. suits my taste

BUY a tidy red tin of Prince Albert, the National Joy Smoke. Throw back the lid and release the most tantalizing aroma you have ever known. Then tuck a load into that old pipe, pack it down, and light up. You're on your way.

Now you're getting it—that wonderful taste of a wonderful tobacco. Cool as a building-inspector. Sweet as the knowledge that you have met his requirements. Mellow and mild as April sun, but with that full, rich, satisfying tobacco-body that you've been hoping to find in a smoke.

And that isn't all. This quality tobacco—the world's most popular brand—is cool and long-burning, right to the bottom of the bowl. That's Prince Albert. Men. I'm here to say that it will suit you and your pipe, too.

P.A. gives you more in every way—this tin contains TWO full ounces.

PRINCE ALBERT

—no other tobacco is like it!

MERCHANTS WILL CLOSE STORES
DURING FOOTBALL GAME FRIDAY

Xenia merchants will cooperate with the "Equipment Day" plans for the Central High-Cincinnati football game Friday afternoon by closing their places of business during the hours of the game.

This was assured Tuesday when J. D. Adair, one of the circulators of a petition asking the stores to close, revealed that most of the downtown business houses were cooperating in the football program.

School athletic authorities are hoping to obtain a large attendance for the contest and students will stage a "pep" parade Thursday evening as a feature of the preparations. School officials point out that the school athletic programs deserve the support of Xenians and that attendance from the home cities of the visiting team has frequently been as large as the attendance from Xenia.

The Withrow game will be the biggest contest on the schedule when Coach Vic Kolb will send his athletes after revenge for a one-touchdown defeat handed the blue and white eleven at Cincinnati last year.

The Theater

A troupe of Negroes occupy the Theater Guild's stage in Manhattan. They take part in "Porgy" which is said to be an answer to the accusation that the Guild worships at the shrine of foreign playwriting. "Porgy" is set at Charleston's docks, written in Negro patois, deals purely with Negro problems and is played almost wholly by a company colored without burnt cork.

The play is based on the successful novel of the same name by Du Bose Heyward, white. Its central figure is a crippled boy and the theme concerns his love for a girl intermittently addicted to dope. The third figure is a towering black murdered who is cowering to death by the cripple in the final act.

Mrs. Josephine Bushman must file a new complaint against her former husband, Francis X. Bushman, film star, if she desires to continue her attempt to collect $52,298 which she declares is due her in alimony. She alleges that little of the $40,000 in alimony and $4,000 a year for the support of her children, has been paid by the film star.

BEES KEEP TOWN BUSY

BOONTON, N. J.—A large swarm of wild honey bees kept inhabitants busy all afternoon when they invaded Boonton and roamed about searching for a swarming place. It took twenty girl employees quite a while to drive the invaders away from the candy counter of a store on Main St. The police headquarters and a shoeshining parlor were also attacked. Then the bees took refuge in a church steeple where three men were working. The men quit the job and refused to go back until the bees had been smoked out.

Eyes of feminine patrons of the Bijou Theater Monday and Tuesday were busy dividing their gaze between the thrilling football scenes and the ermine and velvet outfit worn by Dolores Costello, as "The College Widow," during the game.

"Porgy" is directed by Rouben Mamoulian, Armenian-Russian, until now practically unknown.

Madge Kennedy, former cinema actress, is declared fascinating in Alice Duer Miller's first play, "The Springboard," on Broadway. Sidney Blackmer is meeting the derision of critics in his part. "White Lights" is the sixth play produced this season dealing with life behind the scenes of the show business. It is a musical comedy with a cabaret singer heroine. Mary Eaton and Oscar Shaw are the shining lights of "The Five O'clock Girl" with the scenery by Norman Bel Geddes and "Thinking of You" as the haunting tune. Mrs. Thomas Wiffen dances an old time waltz spryly in "Just Fancy" which also includes Ivy Sawyer and Ray Hitchcock.

RESTRAINS TENANT FROM DIVIDING CORN CROP; OTHER NEWS

A temporary restraining order has been allowed in Common Pleas Court in the injunction suit brought by George Ross against Dallas E. Shipley, which charges breach of an agreement.

Plaintiff owns an eighty-two acre farm in Bath Twp. and the defendant has been putting crops on the farm for the year 1927, consisting of an oats crop and a corn crop, on terms of one-third for the defendant and two-thirds for the plaintiff, the petition states.

Shipley is now engaged in harvesting the corn and is improperly dividing the crop, taking one-half, or every other load, for himself, and giving the plaintiff loads from the bottom ground, which is well cured and round, for himself, and giving the plaintiff loads from the upland, which is still green and immature and not ready for harvesting, Ross complains.

Plaintiff charges the defendant with threatening and is about to acquire and turn on the farm, some feeding cattle. If this is done, the alfalfa crop growing in the same field with the corn will be run over and destroyed by the stock, resulting in irreparable damage, Ross avers.

Ross declares his tenant has no right to pasture on any part of the farm.

A permanent injunction is sought, preventing the tenant from taking more than every third load of corn for himself and from turning stock loose on any part of the farm. Marshall and Marshall are attorneys for the plaintiff.

January term of court begins January 2, 1928; May term starts on May 7, 1928; and the October term commences October 1, 1928, the entry shows.

SKIN DISEASES AND SUGAR

For many years all of us who had any sort of disorder and thought that the diet might have a bearing used to put the blame on "too much meat." A lot of recent research and clinical work is disclosing that in many cases the carbohydrates (sugars and starches) are more apt to be the villains than the meats. For instance, we know that overweight and diabetes are more often caused by an excess starch and sugar consumption, and so are some forms of chronic inflammation in the joints. Now it is being shown that many forms of skin diseases also point accusingly to excess sugars and starches.

Dr. D. Jordan Campbell, writing in the British Journal of Dermatology and Syphilis, May 1927, shows that there are some sufferers of the skin who have an intolerance to carbohydrates, and a restriction of them will often bring about a cure when other methods have failed.

There is a normal amount of sugar constantly in the blood (from six-hundredths of one per cent to twice that amount). It is when the blood sugar rises above this constant, as it does normally after eating liberally of the carbohydrate foods, that these people have the skin irritation. They are not diabetic but simply have an intolerance to carbohydrates.

It is only in recent years that methods have been perfected to estimate the blood sugar. These methods have proved very valuable because often times there is a permanent rise in the blood sugar before the manifestations of diabetes occur—that is, before it is sufficient to be excreted in the urine—and this gives a warning of approaching diabetes which, if heeded,

AUTOIST FINED FOR DRIVING AUTO WHEN HE WAS INTOXICATED

Harold Kneisley was fined $100 and costs, sentenced to serve thirty days in the County Jail and has his right to drive an automobile suspended for six months when he pleaded guilty to operating an auto while intoxicated, before Probate Judge S. C. Wright Monday.

John Ford, arrested with Kneisley in connection with an auto accident in Spring Valley Sunday morning, was fined $50 and costs by Judge Wright on a charge of intoxication and committed to the County Jail until the fine and costs are paid. He pleaded guilty.

Both men are from Pike County. In the accident a woman companion of the men was slightly cut by flying glass and was treated by a Spring Valley physician. She was not held.

The pair was arrested by Sheriff Olmer Tate and Marshal William Consey, Spring Valley. The officers learned the accident occurred when Kneisley, in attempting to turn into a street out of an alley, drove his car into a brick wall, damaging the machine and crushing off a corner of the wall.

ROCKAWAY, L. I. — Into the presence of Justice Wenzel of municipal court came Tailor Max Blum and his customer, Sanford O'Brien. His name has been changed to Fink." So he wanted to hold the breeches as collateral until the Fink bill was paid. O'Brien denied he had changed his name. Justice Wenzel pondered.

"Blum," then said the court, "give this man his pants. No Irishman would ever change his name even for a pair of pants."

DEMAND LOYALTY TO KING

PREMIER ATTEMPTS TO CRUSH MOVEMENT SUPPORTING CAROL

Leader Of Carolist Party
Seized — Issue
Warning

BERLIN, Oct. 25.—Premier Bratianu, of Roumania, has massed troops around all government buildings at Bucharest and today demanded a declaration of loyalty to six year old King Michael from the opposition, said a dispatch from the Roumanian frontier. This is the boy king's sixth birthday.

According to other advices from Bucharest today, the Roumanian government has officially announced that Manollescu, leader of the Carolist party, will be court-martialed charged with being an agent of those attempting to disturb the present constitutional settlement of the future ruler of the country.

Manollescu was arrested yesterday and the government announced that it was preparing to deal severely with all those connected with the movement for the return of former Crown Prince Carol.

Bucharest is under special military control. Public or private assemblies without a permit from the commander of the Bucharest garrison are forbidden.

Realizing that a strong plot is afoot to return Carol to Roumania, Premier Bratianu is taking the strongest measures to crush the plans before Carol can arrive.

Strict censorship is being maintained. All Roumanian newspapers are forbidden to report the arrest of former State Secretary Manollescu.

The official newspaper Lupita printed an editorial demanding that all Roumanian editors who print reports about the royal family be imprisoned.

In view of the strained political situation in Roumania Premier Bratianu is trying to reach an agreement with the opposition (National Peasant Party), which is supporting Carol's return.

All the absent ministers have been notified to return to Bucharest for an extraordinary council.

One journalist who violated the censorship regulations was arrested.

An official proclamation has been issued by the Bucharest government warning that the "severe measures" will be taken to suppress the movement for Carol's return.

Carol is reported to have sent letters to all the Roumanian political leaders challenging the right of his son Michael to occupy the throne and demanding a referendum of the throne issue.

Late advices from Bucharest said that Princess Helen's proposed trip to Florence, Italy, to attempt to arrange a meeting with her husband, Carol, has been cancelled. She was to have departed this evening.

QUAKE'S FORCE SPENT IN OCEAN

Tremor Is Felt in Alaska—Misses
California

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 25.—Fears that a major catastrophe might have resulted as the aftermath of a violent earthquake yesterday, were partly dispelled today when reports received from Alaska indicated that the tremor centered in the north Pacific.

Experts at the University of California also were of the opinion that the tremor centered in north Pacific waters about 200 miles south of the island of Kodiak.

Although the quake was felt in various sections of Alaska, no serious damage was done at any of these points.

SITKA, Alaska, Oct. 25.—A heavy quake was felt here yesterday. The first one, which was the sharpest, was followed by a series of lesser ones which lasted for ten minutes.

Walls of a few houses were cracked and a number of dishes were broken by the force of the quake.

The tremor appeared to be more violent to the north of Chicago and Soapstone Point, where water pipes and windows were broken.

INJUNCTIONS HALT MAYOR

Thumbs Down On Lowden

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—The gory business of killing off—or attempting to kill off—presidential candidates has begun in earnest.

The first to feel the axe is that of ex-Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, who at this stage of the game is one of the quartette of principal contenders for the Republican nomination next June. He has been regarded as "The Farmer's candidate" because of his unflinching work in the co-operative marketing field for the past six years.

A little group of grain-belt senators, not without influence in their respective states, have just concluded a series of conferences here and the verdict has been thumbs down on Lowden. Sitting in these conferences were Borah of Idaho, Brookhart of Iowa, Frazier of North Dakota, Norris of Nebraska, Nye of North Dakota, and McMaster of South Dakota.

No public announcement was made of the Lowden decision reached, but the significant announcement was made that Senator Norris would be backed for the nomination by progressive elements throughout the grain belt.

It has been of this same grain belt that Lowden's supporters have been looking for the major part of his strength.

Gov. Adam McMullen of Nebraska, for instance, already is on record as stating that Nebraska will send a Lowden delegation to the Republican convention. Yesterday, the Nebraska governor was challenged by Senator Borah to state whether he would oppose the sending of a Norris-instructed delegation from Nebraska. The inquiry is calculated to place Gov. McMullen in an embarrassing position before the voters of his state.

ATTORNEYS ALLEGE DESTROYING BOOKS WOULD BE UNLAWFUL

Suits Produce New Angle
In Case To Oust
McAndrew

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—Chicago's war against Great Britain, led by "Mayor General" William Hale Thompson, had spread over additional fronts today. Sporadic firing was reported from various sectors.

A spirited battle took place in circuit court here when two petitions were filed to restrain the mayor and his assistants from destroying library books said to contain pro-British propaganda.

Edward J. Bohac and J. Kentner Elliott, two Chicago attorneys, were the men who, acting in their rights as "citizens and taxpayers," filed the injunctions to restrain the "destruction of public property."

The controversy arose from efforts to oust Superintendent of Schools William McAndrew, who, Mayor Thompson charges, has been spreading British influence in the schools. It is charged that McAndrew used history textbooks which reflected on American Revolutionary heroes.

The school book inquiry inspired the charge that many pro-British books were on the shelves of the Chicago public library. Mayor Thompson then ordered the library searched, stating that all suspicious volumes would be collected on the lakefront and burned.

In his plea for a restraining order, Citizen Bohac declared the destruction of these books would be a dangerous precedent, that if some faction hostile to other national literature got control of the city hall, there would be a precedent for destruction of more books.

Both suits set forth that the citizens have an equity in the books, since they were purchased with taxpayers' money, that burning of them would constitute destruction of public property without due process of law.

"The only parallel to this bonfire proposal," said Citizen Bohac, "is in the burning of the libraries of Carthage and Constantinople, which caused irreparable damage to civilization."

The lakefront bonfire was temporarily halted to await ruling on the injunction suits. U. J. "Sport" Herrmann, a trustee of the library and named by Mayor Thompson as high executioner in carrying out the work of destruction, agreed to await the courts decision and to be governed accordingly.

Investigation and selection of the books to be thus consumed was delegated to the library administration committee at a meeting yesterday of the library trustees.

Carl B. Roden, head librarian, said it would be a "pity" to destroy the suspected volumes, and suggested that they be segregated in a cage where they could be read by trained historians who would not be likely to be influenced by their contents.

Superintendent McAndrew was absent from the city yesterday and his trial was continued until today.

GOVERNOR HURT

LANSING, Mich., Oct. 25.—Gov. Fred W. Green was one of the first state casualties of the new hunting season today when he was bruised and shaken in an automobile accident near Portland, while returning from shooting pheasants.

MRS. GRAYSON WAITS ARRIVAL OF NEW MOTOR FOR OCEAN PLANE

OLD ORCHARD, Me., Oct. 25.—A new motor for "The Dawn", the amphibian plane in which Mrs. Frances Grayson made three unsuccessful attempts to fly across the Atlantic ocean to Denmark, was expected to arrive here today.

The new motor will replace the one which was disabled Sunday when the plane was off Sable Island on its last attempt to make the flight. After an inspection of the engine, T. Harold Kincaid, Wright Aeronautical Company expert, reported its condition to the builders of the plane, who then decided to install a new motor.

No decision concerning the future itinerary of "The Dawn" will be made until she has had a conference with pilot Wilbur E. Stultz and navigator Brice Goldsborough on the feasibility of another trans-Atlantic attempt this year.

Mrs. Grayson said this morning, a conference scheduled for yesterday afternoon failed to materialize, but is expected to be held sometime today.

In the event that the attempt to span the Atlantic is abandoned for this year, it is believed the plane will be taken back to Roosevelt Field, Long Island, until next spring.

HERE'S AMERICA'S "AVERAGE MAN"

Roy L. Gray has been picked as the "most average man" of the United States, after a nation-wide canvass. He lives in Fort Madison, Iowa, incidentally selected as the "most average city" in the land, and the citizens of that town nominated him as their "most average" representative.

EVEN THE MAYOR!

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—"Quit? Why I haven't begun to fight!" Thus spoke Mayor William Hale Thompson today when asked about his drive to rid library shelves of "pro-British books."

When told that his answer quoted Admiral Nelson, a famous Britisher Mayor Thompson laughingly remarked: "Well, there were some good things about the British at that."

EXPECT SIDONS TO RULE ON EVIDENCE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Delayed for an additional twenty-four hours while more information was brought forward, the ruling of Justice Frederick Siddons as to whether the testimony Harry F. Sinclair, oil magnate, gave a senate committee in 1923 can be read to the jury was expected when court convened today in the Fall-Sinclair criminal conspiracy trial.

Counsel for Sinclair and former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall are fighting its admission under a statute they contend gives the wealthy immunity against its use. The testimony in question was to a special trip to Fall's ranch at Three Rivers, N. Mex. in the winter of 1921 to "see about Teapot Dome"—the oil lease which the government contends was fraudulently negotiated and attended by the bribing of Fall with over a quarter million dollars.

REPORT MRS. FIELD ILL IN PARIS HOTEL

PARIS, Oct. 25.—Mrs. Marshall Field of Chicago who is ill at the Hotel Crillon, was reported much improved today by Dr. Edmund Gros, attending physician.

Mrs. Field was taken ill some time ago with a case of intestinal poisoning which has been cured. However, Dr. Gros said, it will be some time before she will be able to regain her normal strength.

PRESIDENT WILL BE SUCCESSOR TO GARY MAGAZINE WILL SAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—James A. Farrell, 64, president and operating head of the United States Steel Corporation for seventeen years will succeed the late Judge Gary as chairman of this mighty world-wide enterprise the November issue of Forbes Magazine will announce, it was made known today.

J. P. Morgan, long a power in world finance, may accept the post of chairman of the corporation's finance committee—a position also filled by Gary—according to B. C. Forbes, financial editor. If Morgan declines some other prominent banker will be appointed.

The banker chosen will be expected to devote his entire time to the colossal task of financing a concern doing a two billion dollar annual business, it was said.

Rumor that either George H. Baker, Sr. or his son, George, Jr. would be tendered the appointment was spiked by Forbes, who declared the elder Baker is lightening rather than increasing his burdens, so that the younger financier has far too many problems, present and future, to tackle the steel post.

Farrell gained his power in the corporation nearly twenty years ago by his extraordinarily successful record in developing foreign business. It was recalled in the article. He was told of his elevation to the presidency by J. P. Morgan, seventeen years ago, after Morgan had been deeply impressed by Farrell's activities in foreign fields as head of the United States Steel Products Company, a subsidiary.

At the offices of the steel corporation, the statement that no "official announcement" as to Gary's successor has been made, was reiterated this morning. A quarterly meeting of the organization is scheduled for this afternoon.

Farrell authorized the following statement: "It is my understanding that no action as to the selection of a successor to Judge Gary will be taken until the November meeting of the board of directors."

CONSOLIDATION OF CHURCHES URGED AT PASTORS' MEETING

Law Enforcement Is Considered At Meet In Columbus

COLUMBUS, Oct. 25.—Consolidation of churches in over-church communities, a study of marriage and divorce, betterment of moral pictures, and educational activity in behalf of law enforcement against gambling, indecent literature and prohibition laws were being considered here today by more than 100 pastors of the assembly or governing body, of the Ohio Council of Churches.

The meeting, at which arrangements are being made for the 1927 Ohio Pastors' Convention and the Seventh Annual School for Rural Pastors, opened late Monday and will be concluded today, following election of officers.

Dr. John M. Moore, New York general secretary of the Federal Council of Churches, Rev. B. F. Lamb, executive secretary of the Ohio Council of Churches, and Myers V. Cooper, president of the Ohio organization were the chief speakers Monday.

"The real difficulty with organized Christianity today lies in the new condition of our times," said Dr. Moore at the Monday night dinner, "which are not being adequately met by the church. Nor will they be met until we achieve a fuller expression of Christian unity. That unity is beginning to make itself felt more strongly in such cooperative movements as the Ohio Council which has made such outstanding progress."

YOUTH KILLED IN FRIENDLY SCUFFLE

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 25.—Edwin Fisher, 10, lies dead here today, victim of a friendly scuffle with a school chum over a revolver late Monday afternoon.

Russell Harnett, 11, son of a policeman, obtained his father's pistol from a bathroom cabinet at the Harnett home, he told authorities, and declared Edwin, who came home from school with him, wanted to see it. When he refused, the scuffle ensued, he said, and young Fisher was shot through the neck.

He died before he could be removed to a hospital.

Helen McCloskey, 23, of New York, motion picture player, leaped out window in Los Angeles, wearing her bridal veil upon hearing of remarriage of her divorced husband. She'll recover from suicide attempt.

LISBON PREPARING WELCOME FOR RUTH ELDER AND AVIATOR

American Minister To Greet Flyers When
Ship Docks

LISBON, Oct. 25.—All was in readiness today for an enthusiastic welcome to be tendered Miss Ruth Elder, pretty American aviatrix, and her flying companion, George Haldeman, who are expected to arrive here aboard the Portuguese steamer Lima from the Azores this afternoon.

The Lima is expected to arrive shortly after five o'clock. Frederick Dearing, American Minister to Portugal, will greet the fliers officially when the vessel comes into the harbor, and a large crowd is expected to be on hand at the waterfront.

Miss Elder and Haldeman plan to fly from this city to Paris.

The Portuguese government has been busy for the last week in preparing a suitable reception to the fliers, and the celebration is expected to outdo any public welcome ever accorded a visitor to this city.

According to present plans, a fleet of airplanes will roar over the harbor when the Lima steams in, as a tribute to the aviators, and the fliers will be feted by government officials and air circles during their stay here.

Miss Elder and Haldeman will face their first large battery of photographers and reporters here since they took off from Mitchell Field, Long Island, on their attempted flight across the Atlantic.

A small army of newspaper and cameramen has gathered here in anticipation of the arrival.

Dearing will be taken aboard the Lima on a government boat, and he will extend an official welcome to the fliers from the deck of the vessel which brought Miss Elder and her co-pilot from the Azores.

PRISONERS IMPERILLED WHEN FLAMES SWEEP BRIDEWELL JAIL

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—Twenty-five hundred prisoners in the Bridewell were imperilled early today by a fire which swept through the two-story administration building.

The flames caused damage of $100,000.

A panic among the prisoners was narrowly averted. Guards went from cell to cell reassuring the inmates while firemen battled the flames. Nearly 200 of the prisoners are women.

All available policemen were called to the scene and stood guard until the blaze was brought under control. The fire started in the laundry room, but its origin is unknown.

"This is the history of scores of banks in the western states, and it is the cloud which is moving eastward at an alarming rate. In Ohio we know of banks that are in positive distress, because of the ownership of land. Our banking officials, who have supervision over banks, know this to be true. It can, will, and shall be remedied. Until recently, the people of the country have not appreciated the need of farm relief. We farmers are poor press agents, and it was years before we succeeded in telling our story to the country."

"It is a story which does not concern the farmers, as such, alone, and that is a newer phase of the question which we must present. It concerns the banks, not alone as holders of loans on farms, not alone as the involuntary owners of farms or lands. It concerns nearly every business or manufacturing institution that deals with farmers, either directly or indirectly, which has felt the plight of the economic depression in America. The banks, which in turn have dealt with these establishments, have felt it, and I make the prediction, will feel it increasingly month by month, and year by year, unless American agriculture is given a fair opportunity with the farmer, with labor, with transportation, with public utilities, and with every group of people who are touched by government."

"This is the message that we have to tell. We tell it plainly, frankly and as appealingly as we are able. We tell it to you, because it is your message as well as ours."

MRS. KRESGE FILES SUIT FOR DIVORCE FROM MILLIONAIRE

Action Follows Suit For
Separation Filed Recently

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The marital dispute between Sebastian S. Kresge, millionaire chain store head, and his wife, Mrs. Doris M. Kresge, became further involved today as the result of a new action for divorce filed here by Mrs. Kresge.

The divorce action followed a suit for separation which Mrs. Kresge filed some time ago. Kresge had previously sued his wife for a divorce in Michigan, but recently agreed to withhold proceedings in that case pending a final determination as to the jurisdiction of the New York courts over his matrimonial litigation.

The new divorce action was disclosed when a notice was filed by Olcott, Ernest and Ernest, attorneys for Mrs. Kresge, that the case was to be placed on the calendar for Nov. 7. Notice was given by Max D. Steuer, counsel for Kresge, that the case would be defended and that dismissal of the action would be sought.

The attorneys declined to disclose the details in the divorce action, or the charges made by Mrs. Kresge.

No complaint in the action has yet been filed. Attorneys for Mrs. Kresge, however, said it was served recently on the defendant.

Official reports today showed that a coast guard plane, operating off Cape Cod, swooped down on 100 cases of innocent whiskey, bobbing up and down on the waves, and with a heavy machine gun barge, sent them to the bottom.

In another air reconnaissance 150 cases were sighted floating within a radius of a mile. Some of the liquor was dispatched by machine gun fire from the plane. Coast guard patrol boats were summoned by radiophone to dispose of the remainder.

Specimens picked up showed that the wet goods were of foreign origin, evidently intended for the American bootleg market.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—There is so much whiskey and alcohol floating off the eastern coast that the coast guard is sinking it with machine gun fire from airplanes.

POWER FROM DEEP HOLES

The British Association for the Advancement of Science seems to be taking quite seriously the proposal of John L. Hodgson, that deep holes be dug or bored into the earth's crust in search of heat for cheap power.

Of course the proposal is not strictly new. Imaginative men, both among scientists and among the literary folk, have long toyed with the problem of the world's future supply of cheap power. Harnessing the tides of the Bay of Fundy is one of the most ambitious of the projects that has been seriously studied by scientists. This idea of digging a deep hole and using the earth's heat to create cheap power is possibly more ambitious and more speculative than the Fundy tide project. But it appeals strongly to the creative imagination.

Mr. Hodgson, who is an engineer in high standing in his profession, suggests sinking shafts to a probable depth of five miles. He estimates that a hole five miles deep might cost about thirty million dollars. Of course that isn't much money to invest in a power plant, if a source of cheap power is to be tapped.

In Italy there are two or three places where factories are actually run by steam generated by heat from volcanic fires. Comparatively shallow shafts have tapped the perpetual heat, and those factories have solved the fuel problem.

Mr. Hodgson presumes that at a depth of five miles there will be sufficient heat to run a power plant of unprecedented dimension. Once the hole is dug, the problem of a community of millions of people might be solved for a period of many centuries.

Thirty million dollars is a considerable sum of money. Perhaps there is no individual in the world who could afford to spend that much money digging a deep hole at a venture.

But a thousand individuals might be found who would be willing to undertake the project collectively, if scientific sanction were strongly behind the enterprise.

GREAT TRANSPORTATION SYSTEMS

Few realize the magnitude of the pipe line system that has been built by the oil industry to transport the crude oil from producing wells to refineries where it is turned into kerosene, gasoline, asphalt, naphtha, etc.

The pipe-line system is very much like a railroad system; it has trunk lines, gathering lines or feeders, terminals, storage yards, switching systems, pumping stations, dispatchers, telegraphs and telephones.

The pipe, of from 4 to 12 inches or even greater, is laid commonly about 18 inches under ground; deeper in cold regions. At intervals of usually about 40 miles, are pumping stations to push the oil along. An 8-inch line can deliver about 21,000 barrels a day. It works much like a city water main, except that the pipe line may extend half across the continent.

The pipe-line system handles annually an amount of petroleum that in tank cars would make up a train 40,000 miles long. There is about a mile of pipe line for every three miles of railroad.

We are urged to brace up and weather the storms, but most people are more inclined to storm at the weather.

The Way of the World

GETTING WHAT THEY WANT

W. J. Bryan used to fond of saying "the people can have what they want." He was talking about politics and democracy. The people get what they want in lines which have nothing to do with politics and democracy. They wanted more silk than there was silk to be had. Cotton wouldn't satisfy. And now the artificial silk industry uses 150,000 tons of wood pulp in one year. The people can have what they want because they can depend on the devotion to knowledge of a few.

RECREATION

The value of the motion picture lies in its power to carry us for an hour into an unreal world. For a time we participate in adventures that will never thrill us in reality. That is recreation. It is getting away from the worries and the perplexities of the day. Unfortunately some pictures put over a sadly mistaken idea of life. Such pictures are no good. They are misleading to youth, and disgusting to a generation that knows better. But clean, lively, humorous pictures furnish real recreation, for they furnish an easy and legitimate escape from some of the unpleasant realities of life.

UP AND ON

The year 1900 isn't so long ago. Stanley Homes, Jersey man, was then an apprentice in a shop. Today he is at the head of the second largest telephone shop in the world—the Western Electric plant at Kearney, N. J. Ultimately 20,000 men will work there. Stanley Homes had a chance. Today's office boy has a chance. You have a chance. We all have a chance. That's the big thing about this democracy of ours. We have a chance. What are we going to do with it?

JUST DIRT

More than $14,000,000 worth of dirt was sold last year. In other words, nearly 4,000,000 tons of clay were mined and sold by producers in this country. Harper Leech, in the Chicago Tribune, tells the story of clay—made into brick and tile and pottery.

It's all dirt—just dirt. Day by day we pass by scores of things that seem worthless. We brush by opportunities without a second look. Just dirt. We don't lack ability, when we once get our hands on something, but we lack imagination to see what a thing MIGHT BE.

There is a story in the common clay that is finally sold for four million.

New Yorker

By
Burton Rascoe

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The colored skyscraper will be in New York, shortly, as much as a part of the scene as the brown stone front was at the end of the last century. Of course the American Radiator people started the fad, with their bold stripes of black and gold. Various buildings along Fifth avenue, from Forty-second street to the beginning of Central park, are covered with faint hints of pastels. Others have their top layers illuminated by night, and my architectural scout tells me the terra cotta people are working overtime, preparing for the demand to come for bright colors for skyscrapers.

A woman friend, who lives within ear-splitting distances of some mysterious uptown excavation, has taken this means to provide herself with some solitude. Every morning early she leaves her apartment in her little sedan, and drives away up to a quiet street in the Bronx, near the city way. Here she parks, brings out the books and manuscripts she is working on, and spends tranquil uninterrupted hours. It has been a splendid haven during the bright weather we've had all autumn, but with November rain imminent, I am afraid she will have to abandon her de luxe gipsying, and give herself up to the tortures of apartment house noises again.

Men's clothing stores are putting out pocket flasks that look like Dunhill lighters, except, of course, that they are three times the size. And drug stores sell boxes of tiny red-tipped sticks that look like matches, but are nothing in the world but miniature lipsticks, to be thrown away after using. It has always seemed to me that one of life's most futile occupations was thinking up devices that look like what they're not. Camouflage in peace-time is just plain silly. Even as a child, I had a violent aversion to chairs which, when sat on, produced tinkling, Swiss music-box sounds.

In case you're interested in the early history of that oasis for all good Bohemians, Greenwich Village, let me tell you that Washington Square itself was once a large plantation divided by the Minetta Brook. This latter meandering stream (for which the lane of rickety houses is also named) flowed into the Hudson on the line approximately marked by the present Charlton and Downing streets.

The Kleinberger Galleries, formerly of upper Fifth avenue, has moved into a swaggy new Gothic establishment at No. 12 East Fifty-fourth street, and is offering, as the first show in the new shop, a loan exhibition of French primitives. The value of these paintings, about sixty in number, runs easily into the millions. Jean Clouet's portrait of Charlotte, daughter of Francis I, has been lent by Max Epstein of Chicago. Belasco himself might have designed the bright-as-day lighting in the main gallery. A glass ceiling, or skylight, is lit with incandescent bulbs which afford a glow almost exactly like that of noonday. Here, then, if one is interested in such matters, may be observed also Mr. Otto Kahn's valued "St. George and the Dragon" by Jean Bellegambe; Jean Fouquet's portrait of Louis IX, lent by Colonel Michael Friedman; and various other panels, bits of rare Limoges china, and what-not.

Today's Recipes
Sour Cream Drop Cookies—One cup sugar, two eggs, one cup sour cream, one-fourth teaspoon soda, two level teaspoons baking powder, salt, flavoring. Flour to make stiff enough to drop from spoon.

Brown Bread—Three cups graham flour, half cup sugar, two cups sour milk, one level teaspoon soda, one teaspoon salt. When baking, invert a pan over your loaf and it steams; bread and makes it more moist. Sprinkle bran flakes on top with a little brown sugar and add raisins or prunes when you want it extra nice.

Suggestions

Browned Flour
It is a very great help in making gravy to have the flour already browned. This can be done by putting the flour in a baking pan, and setting it in the oven. The flour must not be left to burn. After it is the desired color, put away in jars. It is now ready for use in place of using all white flour. When making gravy or preparing a roast, add a little of the browned flour. It adds to appearance and taste.

Eggs in Disguise
Sometimes the little folks tire of the eggs they need so much. Try this way of serving them for change. Just before taking the cooked cereal from the fire, break the egg into it and beat with a spoon till smooth. The egg will be cooked enough and gives the

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

The Old-Fashioned Girl

It's a bit pathetic to me when people try to make believe they are happy and contented without the natural attachments peculiar to their age. "Mother" may be the best pal in the world, but no mother can really take the place of young friends. The parents who tries to keep the son or daughter away from other young people is selfish and making for unhappiness.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl 26 years old and never had a love affair. I don't really care for any man's friendship. Do you think I will find by Prince Charming? I love my dear mother, for she is the sweetest pal a girl can have. I have no girl or boy friend. Mother thinks if I go by myself I will not get with bad company. I sometimes feel lonesome but it is soon forgotten. Please help me if you can. A MISS."

You don't say what help you want, my dear, but I take it that you do want friends in spite of your assertion that you are quite content. A girl your age should be able to choose good friends, and while no one can take a mother's place every young person should have young friends. Don't be self-righteous, but make friends of both sexes and show your mother that you can be trusted.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I wish to say that I married for spite and am very unhappy. I will be married five years but have been separated from my husband for over a year. We just could not get along. I have completely fallen in love with another man. I am

24, while he is 25. I love him so much that I have quit every other fellow for him. But he seems so indifferent at times that I scarcely know what to do. What can I do to make him think more of me? What would you advise me to do? I love him very much. "BLUE EYES."

The business of marriage is more than a jest. It requires all the love, understanding and tolerance of a human being to make it a success. A woman who takes this step flippantly, with selfish, revengeful motives at bottom need not expect much sympathy when unhappy. I would advise you to keep your affections for this other man somewhat subdued until you have unraveled your first marital tangles.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I have been engaged to a young man for two years, but unavoidable circumstances have prevented our marriage. He complains bitterly of this condition, saying that he is not responsible for the long delay in our marriage. He often leaves me apparently grievously hurt and sometimes mad, but he never fails to come back on schedule time, as faithful as ever. Please advise me. My heart is breaking. GENEVA."

You do not say what the reason is for the delay of your marriage. It is, therefore, impossible to tell you what to do. However, if circumstances are such as to warrant the delay, your fiancé should be thoroughly informed about it and if he truly loves you, he will gladly wait. But if your reasons are not sufficient, he is justified in feeling grieved.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MRS. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

What the Blood Stream Contributes to Beauty
Of all the beautifying agents inside and outside your body, no one of them alone can make you beautiful. But if I were to choose one to be placed at the top of the list, I should choose a pure, active blood stream.

Blood must be constantly flowing through your body to keep it alive. It must flow swiftly without obstruction to keep you full of energy and health. For when it slows down, it gets sluggish and impure just like a river. Probably you know that a running stream purifies itself every mile. If you take clear fresh water out of a running stream and leave it in a bucket, it is no longer before it stagnates. It is just the same with the blood that is coursing through your body—it keeps pure by constantly moving. That is why stimulating the circulation is the fundamental principle of all bodily exercises. It is also the reason for the stimulants which are used to improve your complexion. They whip the blood to the surface so that it can nourish the cells and carry away the impurities that cause pimples and blemishes to appear on the skin. For the blood, as you know, is the carrier that brings nourishment and vitalizing elements to the tissues and the same time the scavenger which takes away the waste.

Besides its definite physiological effect upon your beauty—cleanliness and good color to your complexion, firmness of muscular tissue, etc.—your blood stream has a great deal to do with your disposition and this in turn reacts on the expression of your face. If your blood stream is congested, you have pain—This is one of the chief causes of headaches. If it is sluggish you feel "dull" and low in vitality, everything looks blue and you are dissatisfied with yourself and all around you. If it is pure and speeding through your system, taking plenty of nourishment to the cells and carrying away all the waste and dead tissue, you feel happy and light and gay, you have loads more energy and can do every task that is put before you better and more easily.

The first essential to a good blood stream is plenty of air and in my talk tomorrow I am going to discuss "Breathing Beauty into Your Face and Body."

KELLYGRAMS

by Fred C. Kelly

BE SELFISH WHEN COURTING

I'm convinced that one reason why so many marriages don't seem to jell is that folks don't show enough selfishness during courtship.

Everyday during courtship is inclined to be an unconscionable four-flusher. Not only that, but there is much gross misrepresentation of facts—downright dishonesty. Each party the enterprise is trying to appear as a lovely character, free from ordinary human frailties and with one eye ever on the motto: I strive to please.

Naturally, all this involves unselfishness which serves to hide one's true state of mind. Unselfishness is a foe to knowledge of the facts. The young man who dislikes dancing nevertheless goes to dances with his sweetheart because he thinks this will please her.

His unselfishness might be commendable after marriage, but the trouble is that he reserves the proper order and is unselfish only during courtship—the very time when his sweetheart is entitled to the truth about his likes and dislikes.

If she knew that he hated going to dances, she would be prepared to find some other amusement that he also enjoys, or else to find herself another man who honestly shares her enthusiasm about dancing.

But if a man is unscrupulous enough to let her think that he enjoys dancing when he doesn't, she takes him at his word and is doomed to bitter disappointment when she learns the truth.

Of course, she ought to know better than to accept the word of a man in love because she is doubtless being equally unselfish and dishonest herself. She is giving him to understand that she does on washing dishes and darned socks. Perhaps she is even so unselfish as to do mending for him.

Imagine his surprise when he comes to know her better. If each could only behave normally, selfishly and honestly, they would save themselves disillusionment and unhappiness later on.

Women discharge the duties of a human being the same qualities of judgment as do men.

My dear sir, do you remember

Betty Flies Off in a Huff
"Fine night, isn't it?" squeaked Betty, in a pleasant voice as he knew how.

"It's a fine night, I say!" repeated the furry flyer in a louder squeak, but still the boy paid no attention. Bat lost his temper.

"All right, young Two-Legs, don't speak, eep as silent as a rat by a rat-hole if you wish to! See if I care!"

Peter came to himself with a start. "Don't be cross, Betty. I am sorry if I have made you angry, but I didn't hear you. Ha, ha! Did you ever see such a sight in your life? Fourteen little Possums riding on one tail! What fun it must be to be carried off in a swing! How do you suppose those babies manage to hang on?"

I should think Mother Possum would shake them to the ground. She is going at a pretty fast pace, even for a possum, isn't she, Betty?"

Behind The Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—Ex-Judge, ex-Senator and ex-Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall was picked, from the start, to do the job of the defense purpose. He made himself and Fall out two typical old "pardners" of the sure-enough wild western days, and it not only was mighty interesting—full of yards about "diamond hitches," hash-slinging in mining camp restaurants, rattlesnakes, mule-skinning and all that kind of thing—but appealing, as well.

That is to say, they were supposed to be oil properties.

Subsequent expert investigation is said to have revealed that there is not much oil about them. However, the original impression was that they were rich in it.

At any rate, Fall and Sinclair are in just as much trouble over them as if they were spouting it by the thousands of barrelsful.

Fall in Poor Health.
That Fall would be the pathetic old man of the combination was evident from the moment the first juror was put into the box.

The role is one for which Sinclair is poorly adapted. He appears vigorous, bears all the marks of good living, and looks the hard-boiled capitalist, every inch of him. If a doubt existed, at any stage of the game, that he is no object to inspire sympathy in a jury's bosom, wasn't it dispelled by the jury which convicted him of contempt of court a few months ago?

Fall, however, makes a pretty fair "poor old man."

He's genuinely old. He's been sick—probably the real thing, considering the situation in which he finds himself—for a year or two, as is thin as a rail, and sits slumped down in his chair looking discouraged and dejected, with his long, lean, bony, weather-beaten face, his sparse white hair, his snowy raven's wing mustache, of bygone frontier cut, and his brooding expression.

Not Called at First.
Edward L. Doheny, who was acquitted with Fall on a criminal charge in connection with the Elk Hills oil case, nearly a year ago, was perhaps even more pitiable than Fall.

He not only looked older and feebler than Fall then, but he had his arm in a sling, due to an infection.

Doheny took the witness stand in person and told a bang-up story for the defense's purpose. He made himself and Fall out two typical old "pardners" of the sure-enough wild western days, and it not only was mighty interesting—full of yards about "diamond hitches," hash-slinging in mining camp restaurants, rattlesnakes, mule-skinning and all that kind of thing—but appealing, as well.

Fall was not called to the witness stand.

The legal outfit includes some interesting personalities also. Major Peyton Gordon, the district attorney, defers a great deal to the government's special counsel, as well he may, for aren't they the great Philadelphia luminary, Owen J. Roberts, and Atlee Pomerene, ex-senator from Ohio, prominently mentioned on various occasions as a Democratic possibility for an exalted office as president?

Imposing Legal Array.
Pomerene always was distinguished as the solemnest-visaged individual in the senate, and he lives up to it in the courtroom.

Roberts has a trick of elevating his eyebrows, lowering his eyelids, and screwing his mouth down at the corners, into an expression of contempt for the opposition that breaks all records.

George G. Chandler, Roberts' assistant, undoubtedly knows more about the government's side of the oil cases than anybody living.

Martin W. Littleton, to all intents and purposes, is chief of the defense's battery. George P. Hoover helps him, and Fall has his own independent team, William S. Leahy of Washington and Mark B. Thompson of New Mexico.

Littleton is a bulky, formidable-looking character, but for all that, his client, Sinclair, was convicted and sentenced to three months in jail when they tried him for contempt of court, whereas Frank J. Hogan, who did the lion's share of the fighting for Doheny, got his man and Fall, off scot-free.

Justice Frederick L. Steiwer, who presides, is an Englishman by birth, but has lived here nearly all his life.

I Have Said in My Heart

By IDAH MCCLONE GIBSON

TAURUS

An erudite gentleman has taken issue with me on some of my editorials. He is opposed to women being anything except procurers and administrators to man's comfort and pleasure—mostly pleasure.

He seems to think that women are trying to imitate men. God forbid!

What women are trying to do, however, is not to make the sex lure their only stock in trade. They want to be judged by something else than their mere physical attraction.

He writes: "Particularly do I long for the day when women will be 'free from their present obsession of trying to imitate man in everything and return to her occupation of being feminine' (this of course, means to return to being purely the plaything of some man's ego)." The sphere where she belongs, where she can have all the liberties she pleases. (This means only the liberties she can wheedle out of man through the prerogative of her sex.)

However, if women must fight, let them use the original weapons which were the birthright of Mother Eve. They are dangerous enough, and women can do more shooting and sneaking than their men (what about the cross-eyed woman? Will the gentleman tell me what will happen if she shoots both ways at once?) than playing with long-range rifles."

I venture that any decent thinking woman will consider the insult that this man has paid her sex at its full worth.

Women discharge the duties of a human being the same qualities of judgment as do men.

My dear sir, do you remember

Betty Flies Off in a Huff
"Fine night, isn't it?" squeaked Betty, in a pleasant voice as he knew how.

"It's a fine night, I say!" repeated the furry flyer in a louder squeak, but still the boy paid no attention. Bat lost his temper.

"All right, young Two-Legs, don't speak, eep as silent as a rat by a rat-hole if you wish to! See if I care!"

Peter came to himself with a start. "Don't be cross, Betty. I am sorry if I have made you angry, but I didn't hear you. Ha, ha! Did you ever see such a sight in your life? Fourteen little Possums riding on one tail! What fun it must be to be carried off in a swing! How do you suppose those babies manage to hang on?"

I should think Mother Possum would shake them to the ground. She is going at a pretty fast pace, even for a possum, isn't she, Betty?"

Peter looked up. Nothing between him and the path of stars in sky high above the tree-tops. Bat had been there just a second before. Where was he now?

"Alone in the Great Woods!" gasped Peter. Even as he spoke he heard—Swish! Whish! A faint flutter of wings and by the light of the moon the boy saw a dark shape flitting toward the clearing. Already the furry flyer had put some distance between them. Peter had replied to Betty too late, and Betty, displeased at Peter's indifference to him, had flown off in a huff.

"Wowooooo!"

Long and loud sounded the howling of the hound. Woof-Woof must be near. Suppose the creature should take Peter for a Possum and chase him up a tree? He couldn't climb very fast, and he might tumble straight into Woowoo's red jaws. Peter shivered. She is going at a pretty fast pace, even for a possum, isn't she, Betty? He must stop Bat before the fel-that Norse king, who stood on the shore and bade the waves recede? Particularly do you remember what happened to old Canute? If you do, take warning.

With one third of all the women in gainful pursuits — pursuits which do not include woman's oldest profession, either legalized or not — you might do well to "stop, look and listen."

It is a 50-50 proposition, and the more women that enter into the affairs of humanity, the nearer will humanity come to following in the upward path which leads to its real emancipation.

All of which takes us back to the oldest difference between man and woman.

"I am a human being, but as you are," asserts the woman. "I claim my right to have the same voice in the affairs of the world that you have."

"Tush, tush, my dear," say the Mr. A. B. C. and men of that ilk. "You are not human. You are something better than human."

You, my dear are a woman. You are my mother, my sister, my sweetheart, my wife. Why should you wish to be anything else?"

"But how about that much-discussed 'other woman'? Perchance some of our sex may belong to that class."

"Hush, my dear. You must not discuss that. Only the woman who is chaste is worthy of man's regard."

"Go back to your back-biting and your bridge. When I want you I'll call you, otherwise remember that to exercise for health, to think for the benefit of yourself or your children, to have any opinion except mine or some other man's warmed over, will put you out of the class of feminine things to whom we pay court in our light hours and neglect when we're anything we want to do more."

Memo: No wonder women make a weapon of their sex to subjugate the man who will not listen to anything but the call of the emotions.

low flew quite out of sight.

"Batty, Batty, ah, Mr. Bat, please don't leave me," cried Peter. "If you must fly, first show me the way out of the woods. Woof-Woof is coming. Fox and Skunk may be abroad. Who knows but a bear may be out for a stroll? I am lost. Bat, oh, Bat, please wait a minute!"

BATTY ON MR BAT PLEASE DON'T LEAVE ME! HE SAID THE BOY

PLANS FOR PAULLIN DITCH APPROVED BY COMMISSIONERS

County Commissioners have authorized the construction of a single county ditch, known as the Paullin ditch, located in Ross Twp., one and one-half miles in length, petitioned for some time ago by a number of land owners who expect to be benefited by drainage of their land.

Construction of two other single county ditches is also under consideration.

Technical obstacles have been cleared and commissioners at a recent final hearing, approved reports and schedules of County Surveyor W. J. Davis on the estimated assessments on claims for compensation and damages in connection with the proposed improvements.

Objections to the proposed assessments were filed by D. D. Bryan, J. P. Paullin, E. J. Taylor, William Taylor and E. J. Conner. Contract for construction of the ditch will be awarded at 10 a. m., November 14 by Surveyor Davis, who has been authorized to advertise for bids for material needed. Public bids, instead of sealed bids, will be received and considered separately for work and material.

Commissioners have decided that $3,115 will be assessed against land specifically benefited by the improvement and $78.07 will be assessed against the county for benefit to state and county roads. Other minor assessments will be made against political subdivisions benefited.

Owners of benefited land are to be given five years, as taxes are paid, in which to meet the assessments in semi-annual installments. Bonds of the county will be issued and gold to finance the improvement in anticipation of the collection of tax assessments. The bonds will bear five and one-half per cent rate of interest per year, payable semi-annually.

BOWLING

Fords stretched their lead in the Recreation League to three full games by winning two out of three games from the 1926-27 champion Greene County Lumber Co. tonight while the Lang Transfers were defeating the Los Ramos team.

Fords created a new league record this season for total pins in three games, collecting 2,792. Moorehead topped the losers with a series of 602 while Gannon led the Fords with a 598 total.

The Los Ramos team, by losing three games, also lost second place in the league to Langs. The former team was handicapped by the absence of several plays and pailed to roll in its best form. F. Horner led the Lang team and Anderson was best for the losers. Box score Ford-Gr. Co. L. Co. game:

ROBBERY SUSPECT ADMITS HE IS EX-CONVICT; IS STILL HELD

E. H. Fayre, 26, Clarksburg, W. Va., held at Police Headquarters as a suspect in connection with the hold-up of The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., branch store at Main and West Sts., late Saturday night and the attempted hold-up of Ralph Chambliss, Cincinnati Ave., on W. Second St., the same night, has admitted, police say, to having served a term of four years in the West Virginia state penitentiary at Moundsville for conviction on a hold-up charge.

Fayre admitted that he was released from the penitentiary a year ago. He continues to deny, however, having been implicated in the two Xenia hold-ups.

Fayre told police that, accompanied by two companions, he drove to Xenia Saturday afternoon and left his touring car at a W. Main St. garage for repairs. They were to get the machine again Sunday morning.

The suspect declared his two companions later disappeared and he slept in the parked car on the street near the garage all night. He was arrested at 10:30 a. m. Sunday by Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman.

Police think Fayre was one of three unmasked men who attempted to hold up Chambliss and that his two companions perpetrated the hold-up of J. A. Wipert and wife at the grocery store. Wipert is manager of the store.

Fayre declared that he and a friend had been traveling over the country and were en route home when they stopped in Xenia. A third man had been "picked up" on the road, he said.

Fayre had a .22 caliber revolver in his possession when arrested and cartridges to fit a .38 caliber revolver. He will probably be arraigned before Mayor John W. Prugh this week on a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

Police say that a check of license tags showed Fayre to be the actual owner of the car he was driving. Efforts are being made to locate Fayre's two companions who disappeared and a further check is being made on Fayre's movements since he arrived in Xenia.

POLICE UNCOVER VAST AMOUNT OF STOLEN PROPERTY AT HOUSE

Ownership of a cache of stolen goods uncovered by police in a raid on a house in Wilberforce Saturday afternoon, which had recently been rented by John Morgan, 33, colored, E. Market St., is gradually being established, according to Police Chief M. E. Graham.

A search of the residence disclosed not only a large quantity of household goods and clothing which had been stolen from the home of Andrew Darling, colored, E. Market St., last week, but many auto accessories and other articles, since also identified as stolen goods.

Morgan and Carl Lewis, 29, colored, a nephew of Morgan, who arrived at the residence after it had been entered and searched by police, are in custody at Police Headquarters and will probably be charged with burglary and larceny. Lewis is suspected of being an accomplice.

Morgan is said to have readily admitted a number of recent robberies.

Mr. and Mrs. Darling identified their property Monday and hauled a dray load back to their residence. Darling and his wife are employed at Wright aviation field, Fairfield. The latter as maid in the home of a lieutenant. They had been preparing to move to Fairfield and had partially packed their belongings. Returning last Thursday night, they found their home ransacked and looted.

Four room-size rugs, a feather tick, bed clothing, sheets and pillow cases, silverware, clothing owned by both, a gold watch and $40 worth of carpenter tools constituted the loot recovered.

Police say that ownership of other articles found in the house at Wilberforce is being rapidly established. James Hubbard and wife identified a shot gun, rain coat, two or three shirts, a suit and top coat as having recently been stolen from their residence. Several winter coats and two pair of new shoes are still missing, he said.

Two tires stolen in a recent robbery at the Frank W. Hughes Wrecking Co., Dayton Ave., were identified, but two are still missing. A deputy sheriff from Dayton was also in Xenia Monday and identified many articles as having been taken in recent robberies in Dayton and Beaver.

Police believe the house was rented recently by Morgan for the sole purpose of concealing stolen goods.

The raid was conducted by Patrolmen Fred Jones, Charles Thompson, Ed Craig and George Robinson. These cars were necessary to transfer the stolen goods to Police Headquarters.

ANTIOCH STATION WRAP SURRENDERS FEDERAL LICENSE

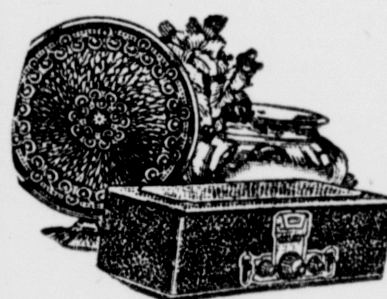

Radio broadcasting station WRAP at Antioch College, Yellow Springs, has voluntarily surrendered its license, it is announced.

The station has received the commendation of the Federal Radio Commission for having supplied such a good example to other stations.

In a letter to John G. Frayne, manager of the Antioch station, Chairman W. H. C. Bullard agrees with the former's contention that there are too many broadcasting stations in this country for the number of available channels and expressed the hope that the Yellow Springs station's withdrawal "will contribute in a small degree to improve the situation in that locality which it must be acknowledged, is still intolerable."

"The voluntary move for cancellation of your license is particularly pleasing," Bullard wrote, "as it will undoubtedly allow the commission to use this example in other cases similar to yours."

Should the situation later improve and the station wish for another license, its application will be sure to receive "very favorable consideration," Bullard added.

JOHN MOORE, New York business man, goes to Tucson, Ariz., on business, expecting to return to New York the next day. He meets a college associate, Philip Morton, who has business in Mexico. Both drink heavily of tequila and in the subsequent mixup in identity Moore finds himself in Mexico.

Here he meets the girl—Ruth Henshaw—who needs his help. He also meets her uncle, Lopez Henshaw, as well as Rodriguez, Lopez, Glench, Ramon, the Ambassador, and Wong and the Chinese cook. John finds that Morton is involved in an arms plot with Henshaw and his friends and is warned to get Ruth out of the country.

First Glench, then Wong are murdered and John flees the country on horseback with Ruth. They take refuge in a cave.

Stew and Beechy, friends of Ruth's with whom John drank tequila in Tucson, rescue them.

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN
An hour later they reached Arivaca. The car roared through the little stream beneath the cottonwoods and up the rise. Adobe houses flicked into view as the headlights fell on them and flicked out again as the car swung down the long street. Very gently it came to a full stop.

"What is it?" asked John Moore sharply, sitting up.

"It's all right, Old Timer," said Beechy quickly. "We're here."

"Right in," Stuart muttered to Beechy. "I'll open the door."

"You waken Ruth, Joe," said Beechy. "And don't linger out here. I'll bring the traps."

"He stood guard while John Moore opened Ruth's door. "Come, Miss Henshaw," John called softly.

The girl opened her eyes. She descended without a word and let him lead her through the dark doorway.

"We won't make a light until you are all in," muttered Stuart on the threshold.

Ruth and John stood together in the center of the dark room; his hand holding her arm. Neither spoke. Beechy and Stuart brought in the saddles and dropped them on the floor.

A lamp was lit in the other room. "Come on in, people," called Stuart.

It was Beechy's turn next. When he was really serious his years in a French school as a lad, claimed him for their own. He took her hand and bowed over it as formally as a French cavalier might have done.

"Buenas noches, senorita," he murmured.

John Moore's hand hung at his side; he could not bring himself to shake hands with her as these others had done. He looked at her very straight.

"Good night," he said.

Her glance swept the three of them impartially. "Good night," she bowed a little. Then she was gone.

"We are going to tuck you in, Joe, right off," said Stuart. "And what I said to Ruth holds good for you. Beechy and I will be on deck for a while. You sleep."

"Thanks," said John. "When I really wake up tomorrow I'll tell you just how much obliged—"

"He's getting poetic," chuckled Beechy. "Put him to bed!"

When Stuart had gone with a cheerful "Good night, Old Scout," and left him alone in the big room known as the bull pen—the room that had once been the "store," Stuart had gazed, crooked meekly at the windows, deep set in adobe walls two feet thick. The lamplight threw a feeble glow. The room seemed gloomy and cold. The picture of the freit cave was in his mind.

He pulled out the little khaki encased watch. "Two o'clock. Two o'clock and all well! Civilization has been regained, but, by Jove! we were getting along perfectly well without it!"

Stuart Long crossed the open court back to the dining room. "It has stopped raining, Beechy," he said, as he opened the door.

"Stew," called Beechy. "In here, and shut the doors behind you!"

There was that in his voice that made Stuart shut the door to the court and lock it quickly. He remembered that the six shooter he had brought from the pocket of the car lay on the dining room table beside the tray of glasses; he groped for it and fastened it around his waist. Then he stepped through the living room door and latched it behind him.

The lamp from the dining room stood on the piano. Beechy stood beside it, his right thumb carelessly hooked in his cartridge belt, his gaze bent upon a man standing near the outside door.

He was a Mexican, unknown to Stuart. Water dripped from his green felt hat and the heavy overcoat bunched about him.

He wants gasoline; is willing to pay a lot to have it taken to a car two miles from here on the "Sasabe road."

"What's the matter with his arm?" asked Stuart, sharply.

"That," said Beechy, meditatively. "Is what interested me. It's his right arm. It just occurred to me—"

"Stew, I'll bet a hat on it!" interrupted Stuart.

"I'll borrow your car," began Beechy, pleasantly.

"The hell you will. You'll stay right here and guard the house."

"Not on your life. Get Richy and just—"

"All right. They can waken Joe if necessary. He must be woken out."

"You don't think we'd better let him know?"

"No," said Stuart. "He can't have the luck! Besides, this is my party! I'm a deputy. You keep out of it, too!"

"Hold on! Has it occurred to you that this may be a blind to get us away from here?"

You make that clear to him while I go for the men to stay here. Tell him we'll go two miles on the speedometer and if we don't find a car, bingo! good night for him! Make him say his prayers before we start."

It might have been fifteen minutes after this that John Moore, still wide awake, heard the whir of a motor starting. He roused up in bed and listened intently. He heard the deeper

The Theater

A troupe of Negroes occupy the Theater Guild's stage in Manhattan. They take part in "Porgy" which is said to be an answer to the accusation that the Guild worships at the shrine of foreign playwriting. "Porgy" is set at Charleston's docks, written in Negro patois, deals purely with Negro problems and is played almost wholly by a company colored with-out burnt cork.

The play is based on the successful novel of the same name by Du Bose Heyward, whose central figure is a crippled boy and the theme concerns his love for a girl intermittently addicted to dope. The third figure is a towering black murdered who is choked to death by the cripple in the final act.

Mrs. Josephine Bushman must file a new complaint against her former husband, Francis X. Bushman, film star, if she desires to continue her attempt to collect $52,298 which she declares is due her in alimony. She alleges that little of the $40,000 in alimony and $4,000 a year for the support of her children, has been paid by the film star.

BEES KEEP TOWN BUSY

BOONTON, N. J.—A large swarm of wild honey bees kept inhabitants busy all afternoon when they invaded Boonton and roamed about searching for a swarming place. It took twenty girls employees quite a while to drive the invaders away from the candy counter of a store on Main St. The police headquarters and a shoeshining parlor were also attacked. Then the bees took refuge in a church steeple where three men were working. The men quit the job and refused to go back until the bees had been smoked out.

NONSENSE

SORRY—BUT TH' ROOM WE HAVE LEFT HAS ONLY A SINGLE COY. OH, THAT'S ALL RIGHT—I'LL SLEEP ON THE FLOOR.

"Porgy" is directed by Rouben Mamoulian, Armenian-Russian, until now practically unknown.

Madge Kennedy, former cinema actress, is declared fascinating in Alice Duer Miller's first play, "The Springboard," on Broadway. Sidney Blackmer is meeting the derision of critics in his part, "White Lights." Is the sixth play produced this season dealing with life behind the scenes of the show business. It is a musical comedy with a cabaret singer heroine. Mary Eaton and Oscar Shaw are the shining lights of "The Five O'clock Girl" with the scenery by Norman Bel Geddes and "Thinking of You" as the haunting tune. Mrs. Thomas Wiffen dances an old time waltz spryly in "Just Fancy" which also includes Ivy Sawyer and Ray Hitchcock.

RESTRAINS TENANT FROM DIVIDING CORN CROP; OTHER NEWS

A temporary restraining order has been allowed in Common Pleas Court in the injunction suit brought by George Ross against Dallas E. Shipley, which charges breach of an agreement.

Plaintiff owns an eighty-two acre farm in Bath Twp. and the defendant has been putting crops on the farm for the year 1927, consisting of an oats crop and a corn crop, on terms of one-third for the defendant and two-thirds for the plaintiff, the petition states.

Shipley is now engaged in harvesting the corn and is improperly dividing the crop, taking one-half, or every other load, for himself, from the bottom ground, which is well cured and ready for harvesting, and giving the plaintiff loads from the upland, which is still green and immature and not ready for harvesting, Ross complains.

Plaintiff charges the defendant is threatening and is about to remove and turn on the farm, some of the crops growing in the same field with the corn, will be run over and destroyed by the stock, resulting in irreparable damage, Ross sets forth.

Ross declares his tenant has no right to pasture on any part of the farm.

A permanent injunction is sought, preventing the tenant from taking more than every third load of corn for himself and from turning stock loose on any part of the farm. Marshall and Marshall are attorneys for the plaintiff.

PARTITION SOUGHT

Partition of real estate has been authorized in the case of J. A. Ellis, son against Edith Ellison and others in Common Pleas Court. R. H. McKay, Charles Hazard and Ed McKay were named to appraise the property.

NOTE JUDGMENT

In the suit of Grace B. Derrick against J. Thompson in Common Pleas Court, plaintiff has been awarded a judgment for $212 the full amount sought, due on a cognovit note.

ACCOUNTING ASKED

Suit for an accounting and foreclosure of mortgage property has been filed in Common Pleas Court by John T. Harbison, Jr. against Asa B. and Henrietta Jones. Plaintiff claims the defendants obtained a loan of $125 and a part of this amount remains due. Defendants gave a mortgage on property to secure the transaction, according to the petition.

FIXES BEGINNING OF COURT TERMS

An entry has been filed in Common Pleas Court by Judge R. L. Gowdy, fixing the day for the commencement of each term of court in Greene County for the next judicial year, beginning January 1, 1925.

Start of the three terms of Common Pleas Court has been fixed as follows:

January term of court begins January 2, 1925; May term starts on May 7, 1925; and the October term commences October 1, 1925, the entry shows.

Make them as brief as possible, NOT OVER 200 WORDS, and type or write them legibly with ink. Please sign your name as evidence of good faith—we will not use it in any way. Remember it is impossible for me to diagnose for you or to answer you personally. I appreciate very much the beautiful letters you send me and regret it is impossible to give you individual advice. The questions you ask will be answered in the column as soon as possible, if they are of general interest. Don't forget the STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED ENVELOPE if you expect me to send you the information I have offered. — Lulu Hunt Peters.

SKIN DISEASES AND SUGAR

For many years all of us who had any sort of disorder and thought that the diet might have a bearing upon it, have put the blame on "too much meat." A lot of recent research and clinical work is disclosing that in many cases the carbohydrates (sugars and starches) are more apt to be the villains than the meats. For instance, we know that overweight and diabetes are more often caused by an excess starch and sugar consumption, and so are some forms of chronic inflammation in the joints. Now it is being shown that many forms of skin diseases also point accusingly to excess sugars and starches.

Dr. D. Jordan Campbell, writing in the British Journal of Dermatology and Syphilis, May 1927, shows that there are some sufferers of certain inflammation of the skin who have an intolerance to carbohydrates and a restriction of them will often bring about a cure when other methods have failed.

There is a normal amount of sugar constantly in the blood (from six-hundredths of one per cent to twice that amount). It is when the blood sugar rises above this constant, as it does normally after eating liberally of the carbohydrate foods, that these people have the skin irritation. They are not diabetic but simply have an intolerance to carbohydrates.

It is only in recent years that methods have been perfected to estimate the blood sugar. These methods have proved very valuable because often times there is a permanent rise in the blood sugar before the manifestations of diabetes occur—that is, before it is sufficient to be excreted in the urine—and this gives a warning of approaching diabetes which, if heeded, will prevent the disease.

AUTOIST FINED FOR DRIVING AUTO WHEN HE WAS INTOXICATED

Harold Kneisley was fined $100 and costs, sentenced to serve thirty days in the County Jail and has his right to drive an automobile suspended for six months when he pleaded guilty to operating an auto while intoxicated, before Probate Judge S. C. Wright Monday.

John Ford, arrested with Kneisley in connection with an auto accident in Spring Valley Sunday morning, was fined $50 and costs by Judge Wright on a charge of intoxication and committed to the County Jail until the fine and costs are paid. He pleaded guilty.

Both men are from Pike County. In the accident a woman companion of the men was slightly cut by flying glass and was treated by a Spring Valley physician. She was not held.

The pair was arrested by Sheriff Oliver Tate and Marshal William Consey, Spring Valley. The officers learned the accident occurred when Kneisley, in attempting to turn into a street out of an alley, drove his car into a brick wall, damaging the machine and crushing of a corner of the wall.

O'BRIEN TO FINK? NO SIR!

ROCKAWAY, L. I.—Into the presence of Justice Wenzel of municipal court came Tatlog Max Blum and his customer, Sanford O'Brien. O'Brien demanded the return of a pair of pants said to be in possession of Blum. "Your Honor," said defendant Blum, "this guy's the brother of Ed Fink who owes me money. His name has been changed to Fink." So he wanted to hold the breeches as collateral until the Fink bill was paid.

O'Brien denied he had changed his name. Justice Wenzel pondered.

"Blum," then said the court, "give this man his pants. No Irishman would ever change his name even for a pair of pants."

While You Hold the Line

NEW operating methods make long distance telephone service now more valuable, more satisfactory, than ever.

Under the old system you placed the call and then hung up the receiver. A short time later the operator called you back and connected you with the distant telephone.

Now, when you can give the long distance operator the distant number, she can complete the call while you hold the line.

The value of this fast service is readily seen. Business men can conduct their out-of-town affairs by telephone just as easily as they talk to associates in their own offices, or call people in their own city. Friends and families are put in almost immediate touch with one another. The whole country is closer together.
